2 Lucky Trashmen $100,000 Winners

Two View Royal men who split $100,000 on the Western Express Lottery were on the job today — collecting garbage.

The happy garbagemen are C. Don Sled, 42, of 25 Midwood, and Real Forcier, 35, of 1335 Chan Place.

They each got $50,000 from a jointly-held ticket in last week's draw.

They operate Sled and Forcier Disposal, a private garbage collection service, from the Midwood address.

It has been business as usual since the big win.

They held a winning ticket on the Nov. 22 drawing but their names were not announced until they claimed their prize.

Both men are married.

The announcement of their win was made today by Western Express lottery officials in Winnipeg. All winners are identified as soon as they collect their money.

Sled had won $500 on a previous draw, lottery officials said.

Winners of $100,000 prizes from last night's Express draw have not yet been identified. Winning ticket numbers are published in today's Times in the official advertisement on page 20.

Border TV War Urged

By CLAUDE ADAMS
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The U.S. government was asked Wednesday to mount a $100-million trade "retaliation" against Canada unless Ottawa backs down on a 1976 tax law that affects U.S. border TV stations.

Although it is highly unlikely that the Carter administration will grant the petition, the request shows the depth of feeling here over a squabble between two giant trading partners that involves only a few million dollars.

As one Canadian TV executive told a special hearing: "Why are we taking about $9 million when the bilateral trade between our two countries is $65 billion a year?"

The issue is a Canadian tax regulation called C-58, which discourages Canadian advertisers from buying commercial time on U.S. stations whose broadcasts spill over the border.

Fifteen American border stations claim that C-58 is discriminatory and costs them about $9 million a year in lost revenue. They are asking the U.S. special trade office, which reports to the White House, to recommend severe and punitive retaliation against Canada unless C-58 is repealed or modified.

Bart Fisher, a Washington lawyer for the group, recommended that the U.S. could retaliate in two ways: by slapping an embargo on all imported Canadian TV programs, feature films and musical recordings, or by changing the terms of the Canada-U.S. Auto Pact to Canada's detriment.

Either of these actions, Mr. Fisher suggested, would be a "last resort if the two coun-

EDMONTON (CP) — A city railway crossing signal arm had an extra load to lift earlier this week. A 23-year-old woman climbed up the five-metre barrier — and could not get down.

It is not known how long the woman had been clinging to the arm, but she was finally noticed by a man who heard a voice above him calling "help me, help me."

A policeman climbed up to persuade her to come down, but she would not move.

Finally, members of the fire department coaxed the woman down. She said she had been chased up the crossing arm after leaving a nearby liquor store.

Nixon Greeted With Eggs

OXFORD, England (AP) — Richard Nixon, braving a gauntlet of egg-tossing protesters, told an Oxford University audience that with his approval the FBI broke up a Palestinian guerrilla network in the U.S. through wiretaps and break-ins during his administraton.

Nixon, who resigned four years ago in the midst of the Watergate scandal, was asked during a question-and-answer period whether the office of the presidency had a corrupting effect on the individual holding the job.

"There are no easy calls that a president makes," he said, giving the Palestinian incident as an example.

He said the group had been planning a terrorist attack like the massacre of Israeli athletes at the 1972 Munich Olympics.

A phalanx of security men had to escort Nixon through an angry crowd of 500 student demonstrators, many of them Americans and some flinging eggs, when he arrived at the Oxford Union debating society hall to deliver the address.

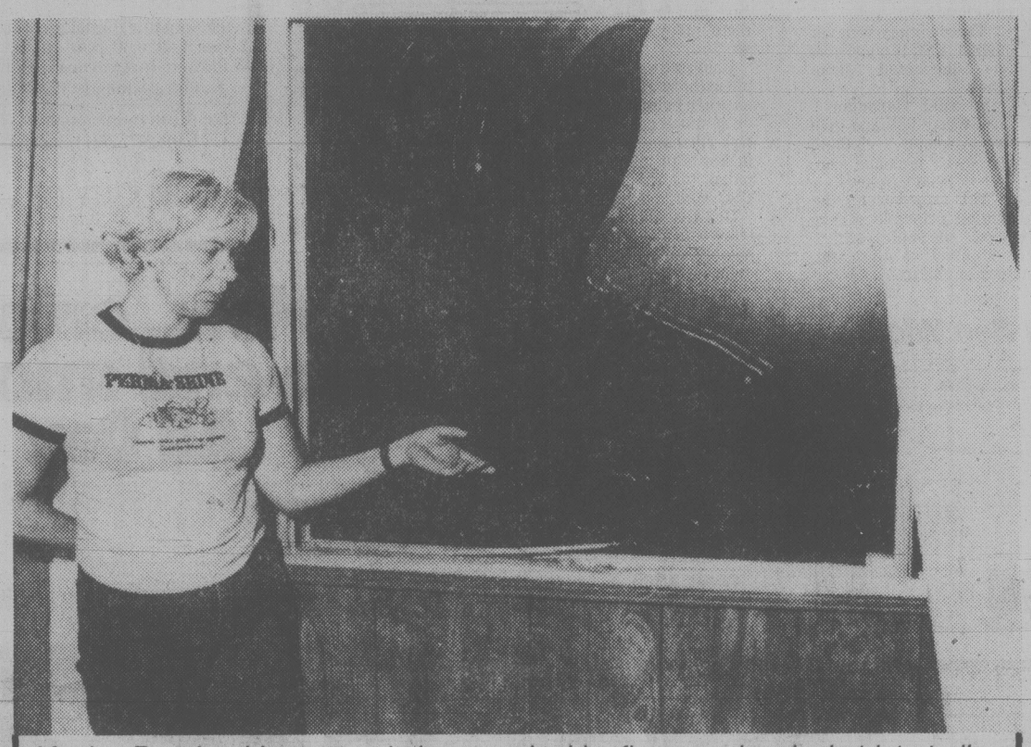
Once inside the hall, Nixon got a friendly welcome from the waiting audience of about 800 students, who applauded loud and long. But at times the ex-president's voice was almost drowned out by the chanting from protesters outside.

"Thank you for the very warm welcome of those inside — and those outside for making me feel very much at home," he said to laughter from the audience.

The demonstrators included 43 Rhodes and Marshall scholars, and more than 100 other Americans studying at Oxford.

Earlier, the placard-waving crowd of British and American protesters pelted Nixon's black limousine as it drove up outside the hall.

The demonstrators, shouting "No crooks here!" and "No more Nixon!", knocked off the helmets of a cordon of British policemen and pushed forward toward Nixon's auto. Secret Service men in tan raincoats rushed forward and surrounded the car, and police eventually held back demonstrators to allow Nixon into a narrow passageway behind the building.



Monica Bouchard inspects window smashed by five-pound rock shot into trailer

NEAR MISS BY FLYING ROCK

A five-pound rock smashed into a trailer home in Langford Wednesday narrowly missing a 17-year-old woman.

Sharon Roberts was watching television in the living room of the trailer at 2435 Trans Canada Highway about 3:45 p.m. when the rock crashed through the front window inches from her head.

"It sounded like an explosion," she said.

The rock hit a coffee table then ricocheted across the floor to the other side of the trailer where it slammed into the wall, gouging a deep hole.

Sharon said the rock was too big to be tossed by a person and believes it came off a passing truck. The trailer is situated just off the highway.

Trailer owner Monica Bouchard estimated damage at about $400.

Mexico Earthquake Kills 9, Injures 600

Times News Services

MEXICO CITY — Nine persons were killed and as many as 600 injured Wednesday in the strongest earthquake to hit Mexico in two decades.

Police reported prisoners fled a penitentiary when the series of tremors collapsed a prison wall.

The quake rocked the Mexico City area, cracking dozens of downtown skyscrapers and showering pedestrians with window glass.

The government news agency Notimex said 15 students at Oaxaca State University in the city of Oaxaca suffered second degree burns when a container of sulfuric acid was knocked over by the quake.

A group of prisoners escaped when a wall collapsed a Oaxaca state penitentiary although four of the fleeing inmates were quickly rounded up.

The epicentre of the earthquake was in the Gulf of Tehuantepec off the coast of Oaxaca state in southern Mexico.

The first shock Wednesday afternoon lasted 70 seconds and caused panic among Mexico City's 13 million people. Many were in skyscrapers or in elevators on their way to lunch when it struck shortly before 2 p.m. Thousands of tourists in Mexico City fled from their hotels, many with their bags.

Five more tremors were felt in the capital before 6 p.m. Readings on the first and most severe shock ranged from 6.5 to 7.9 on the Richter Scale.

Police in Puerto Angel and Puerto Escondido said waves came 600 metres inland. But police in Acapulco, Mexico's biggest Pacific coast resort, said there were no tremors there.

LOUGHEED TICKETS JUST 'STUPIDITY'

EDMONTON (CP) — An Air Canada employee says he made a mistake in arranging to provide free tickets for Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed.

It was "stupidity on my part," Jack Cronin, manager of passenger sales, said Wednesday.

Cronin said he is embarrassed by the incident but does not expect to be reprimanded.

Lougheed said Monday he has accepted free vacation flights from Air Canada and CP Air a number of times during the last few years.

Cronin said: "I've been led to believe that Air Canada has a policy against giving passes to provincial ministers, but I thought it was appropriate—the thing to do at the time."

Harold Millican, a former assistant to Lougheed, said Wdnesday he understood from Air Canada officials that it was policy to offer free trips to provincial leaders.

Cronin said he met Lougheed at a social function in 1972 or 1973.

"He appeared to be tired. He'd been busting his bottom working so I offered him a chance to take a look at our services. He was a bit taken aback, so I told him to think it over, discuss it with his wife and get back to me. A few days later, he did."

Cronin said Lougheed accepted a trip to Barbados worth about $1,000.

CUPW Charges Workers

TORONTO (CP) — The organization committee of the Toronto local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers is asking members to take action against other members who crossed picket lines during the postal strike in October.

The committee has issued a bulletin asking members to lay charges against co-workers who crossed picket lines before back-to-work legislation was passed by Parliament. The bulletin says charges may be laid under an article of a union agreement.

Any workers charged would be tried by a union committee.

Nigel Dunn, a post office spokesman, said workers would not lose their jobs if they were expelled from the union as a result of the charges.

"It isn't a closed shop," he said. "When an individual is hired at the post office, he has the option of joining or not joining the union."

No Oil Price Boost Jan 1: Ottawa

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The federal cabinet has decided to press ahead with its proposal to delay a Jan. 1 oil price increase of three cents a gallon despite opposition from some provinces, Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said today.

Gillespie said after a three-hour meeting "it is the view of the cabinet that it is in Canada's interest to defer the increase."

He had been authorized to open talks with Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed.

Alberta already has said that it does not care whether it goes ahead with former plans to raise the price of crude oil by $1 a barrel Jan. 1 or delays the increase.

Gillespie said he wants to discuss with Alberta some formula to protect the Canadian price from exceeding the U.S. price—a provison already included in an existing oil price agreement.

Provincial premiers declined to approve a new price pact during private talks Wednesday, throwing the question back to the federal and Alberta governments for a decision.

At issue is an Alberta-Ottawa plan to delay a scheduled January price increase until July 1, adding on an additional $1 a barrel — three cents a gallon — increase in January, 1980, in return.

Lougheed says he is willing to accept either of the two price options placed before the premiers during a three-day economic meeting that ended Wednesday.

That placed the decision in the lap of the federal government, which holds legal control over whether national oil prices should be increased.

"The dilemma of the federal government is that we are faced with the producing provinces on one hand and the consumers on the other," Prime Minister Trudeau told reporters as the conference wound up.

Several premiers said openly they feared the new federal price initiative was more politically than economically inspired.

Meanwhile, Quebec Premier Rene Levesque said today that the unsatisfactory results of the three-day conference will lead Quebec to be more selective in its participation at federal-provincial conferences.

Levesque said he feared from the outset that nothing much would come of this latest round of talks and his fears were amply justified.

Concrete proposals for federal action in areas such as fisheries, agriculture, industrial and economic development received "negative and I would even say, electoral" answers or no answer at all, Levesque said.

USC Hoists Banner Again

The 1978 Unitarian Service Committee's fund appeal in Greater Victoria is off to a flying start.

Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova launched the annual drive — supported again this year by the Victoria Times — at a public meeting Wednesday night in the Empress Hotel.

An on-the-spot collection, which included a cheque from the Times, realized $1,839, a record and up more than $500 from a rally a year ago.

Chairman Stuart Underhill, president of Victoria Press, said the Victoria campaign this year hopes to surpass the $33,600 contributed in 1977.

The USC is trying to raise a national total of $3.5 million by Christmas.

The USC funds more than 98 projects in needy countries around the world.

The question of $2.25 million pledged by the B.C. government but never turned over to the people of Vietnam came up at the meeting.

Dr. Hitschmanova, executive director of the USC, told the meeting she had no comment on the fact the money has never been made available to aid Vietnamese war victims.

But she said the USC

Siamese Twins Doing Well

Preliminary tests were being carried out today on Victoria's first Siamese twins to determine whether they can be separated.

Dr. A.C. Pickles, executive director of the Royal Jubilee Hospital, said the girls, born prematurely to a Duncan woman just before midnight Tuesday, are still having respiratory problems because of their prematurity.

"Their condition is stable," Pickles said.

The girls are joined by a bridge of tissue across their chests.

The mother, about 20, is doing well. The twins are her first children.

The delivery took place at the Royal Jubilee Hospital because it is the best equipped on Vancouver Island to handle premature births.

The twins weighed a total of 4,550 grams or 10 pounds, one ounce at birth.

Gynecologist Dr Edward Prevost, who attended the delivery, said there was no indication before the birth that the babies were joined.

Pediatrician Dr. Chor-Kei Chan, who was called in at the delivery to assist the premature infants, said incomplete lung development is common among premature babies.

He said an attempt at separation, which usually takes place several months after birth, can only be made after it is determined which organs, if any, the twins have in common.

"At the present time, we are only concerned about their respiratory problems."

The "ventral" joining is the most common type among Siamese twins, which occur about once in every 70,000 deliveries.

Sometimes the separation involves cutting only simple tissue but Siamese twins often share liver tissue and, frequently, a heart, which makes separation impossible.

In other cases they have separate hearts and circulatory systems but the hearts may share the same pericardial sac, a fluid-filled enclosure around the heart.

Prevost said the babies are very alert and breathed quite readily at birth.

"It was not a particularly difficult delivery," he said.

Hen-Pecked Husbands Rob Banks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The only reason for robbing a bank is to steal money, right?

Wrong, says a psychiatrist who examined more than 200 bank robbers and found their motives ranged from proving their manhood to embarrassing a domineering wife.

"The act of committing a bank robbery often had very little, if any, relationship to the theft of money for personal profit," Dr. Donald Johnston concluded after a two-year study of federal prisoners convicted of robbing banks.

He found many bank robbers to be "passive and dependent, sometimes ignorant, often physically unattractive, and not infrequently grossly psychotic."

Johnston, an assistant clinical professor of psychiatry at the University of Colorado Medical Centre in Denver, described his findings in a telephone interview and in an article in the current issue of the American Journal of Psychiatry.

Few of the robbers he studied, Johnston said, were professional criminals in it for the money. Most were deeply troubled men who saw bank robbery as a way of overcoming a lifelong sense of failure.

For example, a man identified only as Mr. B felt his successful father considered him a weakling, the psychiatrist wrote. "He married a greedy and demeaning woman and was divorced by her after seven years."

Mr. B went to San Francisco, intent upon drowning himself in the ocean but found he couldn't go through with it, Johnston related.

Later, "in front of a bank, he met a hippie who asked him for a quarter."

"This stimulated a resurgence of his sense of failure because he realized he had no money. He told the hippie, 'Wait a minute, I'll get some,' and immediately headed into the bank. The hippie realized what was about to happen and ran away."

Ignoring an armed guard, Mr. B politely waited in line at a teller's window. "When it was his turn," Johnston wrote, "he attempted to rob the teller with what he described as a 'Humphrey Bogart sneer' and his finger in his pocket suggesting that he had a weapon."

Then there was Mr. C, who robbed a bank twice to punish his domineering wife.

At 51, Mr. C was fat, "had ill-fitting dentures" and felt he was a failure at everything. Unable to stand up to his wife directly, he would "fiddle with chemicals in the basement, making small explosions which would frighten her," Johnston related.

Finally, in a fit of rage at his wife, Mr. C "robbed a neighborhood branch bank with a jar of Wesson Oil," convincing the teller that it was nitroglycerin. He was immediately arrested. "His wife was ashamed of him and divorced him."

Released from prison eight years later, Mr. C remarried the same woman and soon robbed "the same bank, the same teller's cage, with another jar of Wesson Oil." Again he went to prison, where he "spoke of his act with real pleasure, knowing that he had made his wife miserable again."

HERRING OFFER REJECTED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Herring fishermen in British Columbia have voted 73 per cent to reject the fishing industry's latest price offer of $108 a ton for food herring, a union spokesman said Wednesday.

The spokesman for the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union said the rejection came despite a recommendation by the union that the members accept the offer.

The fishermen earlier turned down an offer of $96 a ton for the herring. The union is seeking $180 a ton.

The spokesman said that the union has advised the Fisheries Association of B.C. that it is ready to resume price negotiations.

USC Funds Needed More Than Ever

could find ways to allocate all or part of the fund immediately if the money were available.

The fund was created by a unanimous vote of the legislature in 1973, but a committee subsequenty established to decide on its disbursement folded at the end of the last legislative session without making any decision, although about $300,000 of the fund was spent through several agencies working in Vietnam.

One woman at the meeting said she had taken the matter up with former B.C. Tory Leader Scott Wallace, who served on the legislative committee.

The woman said she was told the public should write Premier Bill Bennett to ask that the money be released.

Despite the USC's work, the need for aid grows instead of diminishing, Dr. Hitschmanova told the meeting.

In some places physical conditions are improving but the need for medical help and food and clothing is unabated.

In Bangladesh and Indonesia the cost of living has risen prohibitively and parents can't afford to feed children even one meal a day.

At one Bangladesh station, children and old people line up for a daily issue of 9,000 cups of Canadian milk. But there is grave undernourishment.

"Over and over gratitude is expressed for this life-saving contribution from Canada," Dr. Hitschmanova said.

"There simply is never enough; USC is a godsend for uncounted thousands."

She said Canadians must waste less and give more money, clothing and more personal concern to people in need.

"This must become the guiding principle of our days," she said.

Greatest of all is the need of children.

"Children are like the flowers and the beautiful trees. They need food and care and love — without them, they wither and die."

Underhill said few people in the world have seen as much human suffering or as much generosity as Dr. Hitschmanova, now in her 26th annual campaign for the volunteer USC relief agency.

Dr. Hitschmanova paid tribute to the Times for helping launch the movement in 1953.

Local organizer Mrs. Hazel Woodward, reiterated the appeal for help.

"The need is not becoming less. We need more and more and more," she said.

At the meeting recognition was given to the men and women volunteers who collect, make, pack and ship the clothing, bedding and medical supplies sent from Victoria.

Among those honored was Ida Weisse, who was presented with a gold USC pin to mark her achievements for the organization here in Canada.

To date this year, 11.9 tons of material have gone to Vietman from Victoria, compared to just over six tons at this time a year ago.

USC reception depots at Victoria fire halls will accept clothing, drapes and curtains in good condition, wool scraps, blankets, sheets, pillow cases and other pieces of cloth for mending and remanufacture into new garments.

Volunteers also accept buttons, elastic, safety pins, clear fat for soapmaking, knitted and crocheted crib throws and garments for infants.

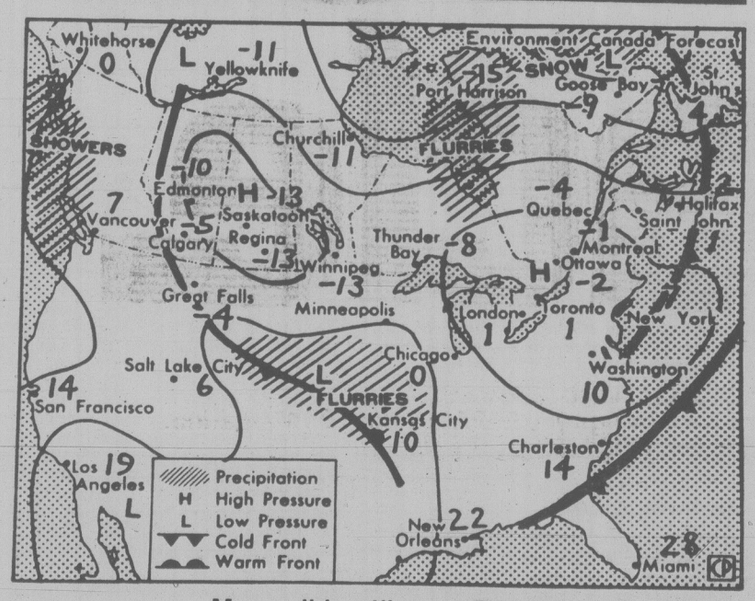

Map valid until noon Friday

Unsettled weather is expected to continue across the province. Coastal areas will remain cloudy with showers although some clearing is likely on the north coast later today. Interior valleys will remain filled with low cloud but the snow is expected to ease in most areas. A high-pressure ridge promises brighter weather for B.C. Friday. The weekend outlook, however, is for cloudy and wet conditions.

UIC Payments Up 19%

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment insurance payments in the first nine months of the year totalled $3.6 billion, up about 19 per cent from the $3 billion paid out in the same period last year, Statistics Canada said Wednesday.

The average number of monthly claimants this year has been 838,000, compared with 761,000 in 1977. Unemployment this year has been at the highest rates since the 1930s, hovering about 8.5 per cent.

A total of 1,979,000 claims were submitted during the first nine months of this year, up three per cent from 1977.

Personal Sadat Note to Begin

Times News Services

Egypt sent a handwritten message to Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin today concerning developments in the peace negotiations, the Middle East news agency reported.

Egypt's official news agency said the letter was handed by Vice-President Hosni Mubarak to the U.S. ambassador in Cairo, Hermann Eilts, for relay to Israel.

The contents were not given but the message, presumably from President Anwar Sadat, is believed to contain Egypt's latest proposals to overcome the impasse in the Washington peace negotiations.

Egyptian Premier Mustafa Khalil is on his way to Washington for talks with President Carter. He is carrying proposals for modifications of the U.S. draft treaty submitted to Egypt and Israel Nov. 11.

Diplomats say the proposals concern suggestions on linking progress in Egyptian-Israeli relations with steps to establish Palestinian autonomy in the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

Meanwhile, Senator Robert Byrd, Carter's personal envoy, arrived in Tel Aviv from meetings with Sadat in Cairo and was driven to Jerusalem to see Begin.

The Senate majority leader told reporters in Cairo after seeing Sadat Wednesday that "President Sadat, like President Carter, wants the negotiations to be resumed and is ready to do so."

Israel so far has taken the position that the negotiations are finished and that Egypt should agree to sign the draft treaty which the Israeli cabinet endorsed.

Meanwhile, Palestinian guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat vowed Wednesday to sabotage U.S. peace efforts in the Middle East.

In a speech marking the UN's observance of what it called an "international day of solidarity with the Palestinian people," Arafat also denounced Sadat as a "lackey."

At a mass rally in Beirut he told cheering crowds Israel's autonomy plan for the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip "would pass only on our dead bodies."

Arafat described Carter's efforts to get Sadat and Begin to sign a peace treaty as a "plot against the Palestinian people."

At the United Nations, the "Solidarity Day" was a one-sided show as Western members including Canada stayed away.

Security was heavy with UN headquarters closed to visitors for the day.

Outside, police kept several hundred demonstrators behind barricades and lots of room between the opposing factions. Despite the shouting by pro-Palestinian and pro-Israeli groups, there were no incidents. By nightfall, everybody had gone home.

The Palestinian rights day came on the 31st anniversary of the UN resolution partitioning Palestine and will become an annual affair.

Donkey Rider Killed

JERUSALEM (Reuter) — A man was killed today when a bomb went off on the slopes of the Mount of Olives in East Jerusalem. The man was riding a donkey, which was also killed in the blast.

Blizzard Lashed Etna Spews Lava

CATANIA, Sicily (UPI) — Lava pouring from a new mouth of the blizzard-lashed Etna volcano advanced towards a town of 7,000 inhabitants Wednesday, but officials said it posed no immediate threat.

"There is no danger. You can say we're all calm here," said a municipal official in Zafferana Etna, 1,968 feet up on the slopes of Europe's tallest volcano.

He said the lava from a new mouth that opened overnight at an altitude of 5,413 feet was still three miles away from Zafferana and advancing "very, very slowly."

The new flow bypassed the bowl-shaped "Valley of the Ox" into which lava from two other side mouths flowed harmlessly, and moved down an incline known as the "Slope of the Mare." By early morning it had started eating into a pine forest and a chestnut grove above Zafferana.

A heavy snow storm raged over the 10,707-foot volcano, which the Greek poet Pindar called the "abode of Snows" and the "Pillar of Heaven."

Tacoma Sheriff Arrested On Arson, Rackets Counts

TACOMA (AP) — A 13-month federal investigation of alleged death threats, bribery, arson, payoffs and terror tactics in Pierce County climaxed Wednesday in charges against Sheriff George Janovich and eight other men.

The disclosures shook Washington state's second largest county with a population of more than 420,000. Hundreds of citizens called the sheriff's department with angry insults or in disbelief.

Janovich, 50, who was arrested Tuesday and released Wednesday after posting bail of $50,000, was accused in what the U.S. Attorney's Office described in its formal complaint as a plot to make money from "acts and threats involving murder, arson, bribery, extortion and illegal gambling, and by retaliating with violence against the person and property of persons who they suspected of providing information to criminal investigators."

The complaint, filed by U.S. Attorney John Merkel, did not accuse Janovich of committing or plotting to commit violence but it said he acted as protector of those who did. Conviction carries a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a $25,000 fine, said Merkel.

The case is linked to a rash of arson fires early this year and late last year, mostly at area taverns featuring topless dancing.

Janovich and the eight other men before a magistrate Tuesdau and a preliminary hearing was set for Dec. 8.

Highest bails were set at $1 million cash for John Joseph Carbone, described in the complaint as the kingpin of the alleged extortion racket, and Ronald John Williams, the man described as Carbone's deputy and close business associate.

Bail was set at $500,000 for Carbone's son, Joseph M. Carbone, and at $100,000 on Frank Julius Mazzuca, described in the complaint as another Carbone lieutenant.

Political Fluff Fund

NDP MLA Eileen Dailly charged this week that Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy is using the B.C. lottery fund as a sort of political pork barrel, offering dozens of grants to worthy organizations — provided that those worthy organizations come from ridings that voted the "correct" way (Social Credit, of course) in the last election.

McCarthy described the allegations as nonsense, ludicrous and "sheer political fluff from Mrs. Dailly," but a partial list of disbursements from the fund, made public by McCarthy herself, show that, when the usual NDP rhetoric is removed, there is considerable substance to the charges.

Even the quickest examination of the list will show that the proportion of grants to Social Credit ridings is much too high to have occurred by chance.

The list shows 45 groups that have received grants totalling a little less than $6 million from the mysterious lotteries fund. Of them, 11 are either province-wide groups such as the Salvation Army and Canadian National Institute for the Blind or groups which serve all of Vancouver or Victoria.

These may be removed from statistical consideration since they cover areas represented by both government and opposition MLAs.

Yet even these grants show signs of a heavy tilt towards Social Credit-supported projects. For example, the Victoria-based Quest Star Society, that terribly sincere group who bought the ill-fated schooner Freelance, received $150,000. Quest Star has for months been known as a pet project of Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf.

In Vancouver, a whopping $650,000 went to a group known as the B.C. Forest Foundation — a group undertaking a pet project of Forests Minister Tom Waterland, the building of a forestry information centre in Vancouver.

Despite this, let us examine the statistics only for the remaining 34 projects, each of which is listed as aking place in a single riding. The grants for the 34 projects total about $1.58 million.

Not counting the Vancouver and Victoria seats, there are a total of 41 ridings in the B.C. legislature. Of these 28, or 68 per cent, are held by Social Credit MLAs; 13, or 32 per cent, by opposition MLAs.

It follows then that if the grants were distributed randomly, about 68 per cent of them should end up in Socred ridings, the rest in opposition ridings.

If 34 projects were to be funded, this random distribution would mean that Socred ridings would get 23 projects, opposition ridings 11.

But, in reality, the pendulum swung much further in favor of the Socreds — 32 of the 34 projects, a full 94 per cent, went to Socred ridings. Only two projects in opposition ridings received funding.

About the same proportions apply in examining the amounts of money spent in the various ridings. A random distribution would have $1.07 million going to Socred ridings, $510,000 or so to opposition ridings. But in fact, Socred ridings got $1.48 million, or 93 per cent of the total funds available, leaving opposition ridings only $100,000.

Any statistician will tell you that the chances of those results being achieved by chance are remote in the extreme.

McCarthy says the government does not ask applicants for lottery funds for their political affiliation, and she is undoubtedly speaking the truth. It is much more likely that a more subtle process is at work whereby the government is moved to generosity, perhaps unconsciously, by such factors as the support shown the application by the local MLA — if the local MLA happens to be considered reliable by virtue of which side of the House he sits on.

This is not to suggest that any of the projects approved are unworthy of support. They are probably all quite meritorious — although one might wonder about the richness of some of them for a province with many social problems. Is, for instance, $29,000 for a gymnastics program in Port Moody or $25,000 for the Fort St. John Ski Club the most important priority the government has for its money?

Even ignoring that point, however, the main question remaining is: why has it been that almost all the acceptable proposals for park improvements, help for senior citizens, community bands, programs for the handicapped and so on have originated in ridings held by Socred MLAs? It is impossible to believe that so few groups in opposition ridings offered proposals as good as the ones that were accepted.

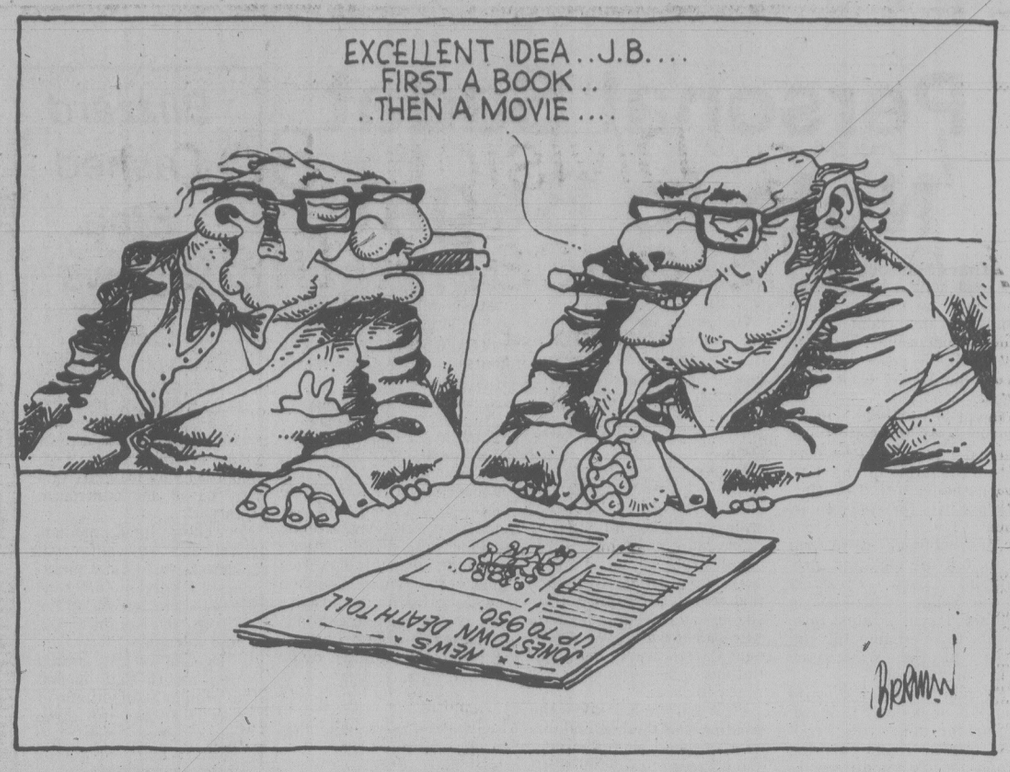
The partial list, released only after McCarthy had come under considerable pressure for her secrecy in the matter, makes it abundantly clear that the current procedures for administration of the lotteries fund are grossly inadequate.

To begin with, the list accounts for only about one-third of the lottery money so far handed out. As yet no breakdown is available for the $3.9 million given through the B.C. Cultural Fund, the $2.9 million given through the Physical Fitness and Amateur Sport Fund, the $1.7 million given through the Special Events Fund or the $2.7 million given through the Health Care Research Foundation. Has the same politically-skewed distribution occurred in distribution of this money? It is urgent that McCarthy answer that question by providing a complete list of the grants made under each fund.

Second, the minister should immediately make public the procedures the government uses in dealing with grant applications, the criteria by which applications are accepted or rejected, and the priorities of the government in deciding which projects are the most worthy. Is a certain proportion of the money given to programs to help the aged or handicapped, another proportion to projects of park improvement and beautification or is each application judged individually? Does the government try to strike some sort of a regional balance in funding programs?

If this information was made public, the government would have gone a long way towards providing some accountability for the lotteries fund.

But without it, the Socreds will constantly be open to criticism that the lotteries fund is really a patronage fund and will have few defences available against that criticism.



RICHARD GWYN

Canada: a Panel Discussion

KINGSTON, Ontario — Playwright Tom Hendry once remarked that no Canadian will make it to heaven because, at the Pearly Gates, we will face a choice of signs that point to Heaven and to Panel Discussion on Heaven.

As note-taking, point-of-order making veterans of hundreds of conferences, colloquiums, seminars, symposiums, think tanks and workshops, we will all trot dutifully off to the panel discussion.

Canadians talk to each other more on the telephone than do any other people. We also talk at each other more, surely, than do any other peoples, in meeting halls, in church basements, in hotels, at conference centres, in deck chairs, in plastic stacking chairs, around round tables, or oval tables, or huddled at the edge of a lake, and all the time worrying about What It Means to Be a Canadian, or What Should It Mean?, or What Is the Meaning of Meaning?

No Reality Intruded

Actually, since as Winston Churchill observed, it is better to jaw, jaw, jaw than to war, war, war, this particle of the Canadian identity has its benefits. Nothing ever gets solved. Some useful things, though, get said. And everyone leaves these gatherings feeling properly edified.

Of its type, the Workshop of the Political Economy of Confederation, held jointly at Kingston recently by the Economic Council of Canada and the Queen's University Institute of Inter-Governmental Relations, was typical.

Tacky outside reality seldom interrupted the even, high-minded temper of debate. The exception was national unity task force member Solange Chaput-Rolland. Royal Trust, by moving from Montreal to Ottawa, she said, had revealed itself as "the Royal Distrust Company."

As well, nothing got decided. One economist said his computer told him Quebec would lose a trivial 21,500 jobs if it separated completely. This calculation contradicts estimates of job losses as high as 300,000 issued by Ottawa's federal-provincial relations office. The trouble with the low estimate is that it is based on what other economists called "inadequate data." It takes no account of the things a computer can't tell you, such as whether investors would haul their funds out of Quebec, or whether other companies would go down the road after Royal Trust.

Yet, in its circular way, the workshop advanced a few inches toward the heaven of a Renewed Confederation. Political scientist Richard Simeon, for example, reduced the scale of the Confederation "crisis" to manageable size. "It is not a crisis of the fundamental social and economic order of Canada," Simeon said, "it is a crisis of governmental institutions . . . a competition concerning where and how interests are to be served."

Some of the forward steps:

The west and freight rates.

In talking so much about freight rates, the west is talking rubbish, said University of Alberta economist Ken Norrie, a heresy for which he no doubt will get dropped down an oil well when he gets home.

"One doesn't like to agree with the railroads," said Norrie, but "there is no evidence that the industrial structure of the region is significantly adversely affected by the current mix of freight rates." Indeed, said Norrie, freight rates on outbound prairie manufactured goods are lower than on incoming products. In reply, Stan Roberts, president of the Calgary-based Canada-West Foundation, said Norrie's data base was "inadequate."

Quebec and Sovereignty-Association.

If the economists are right, Premier Rene Levesque couldn't be more wrong in advocating political sovereignty for Quebec within a pan-Canadian economic association.

Such a formula, it seems, would lose Quebec all the benefits of Confederation, such as $2.2 billion worth of federal payments, according to one economist's calculation, but would give it none of the offsetting benefits of full independence, such as the ability to devalue its currency to offset its reduced economic competitiveness.

Some workshop types indeed thought that complete separation might do Quebec more economic good than Confederation has been doing. "Separation would allow Quebec to restructure its economy in the way that it has to, and in the only way it ever will do because, so long as federal transfer payments continue, it never will have to restructure its economy," said University of Western Ontario economist Tom Courchene.

'What Does Quebec . . .'

Canadians and Confederation.

We don't, it seems, know what we want, or we do, but our wants cancel each other out.

Two-thirds of Nova Scotians, according to a survey reported by political scientist George Rawlyk, want their provincial government to have more power, yet almost as many don't want the federal government weakened. Westerners, said Roberts, "are thoroughly dissatisfied with the present federal system," and yet, "they don't want the provincial governments running Canada. They don't believe in small-c confederation."

In the hierarchy of Canadian panel discussions, three insights and one good one-liner is a bit above par. As a bonus, everyone could leave feeling properly edified: No one, during two-and-a-half days, had said: "What does Quebec really want?"

BRUCE HUTCHISON

Carter Must Go for Broke

WASHINGTON — On a sunny autumn day, in this opulent city that governs the United States, lives on its taxes but remains isolated from its life, a homely parable could be read by any Canadian visitor.

The street east of the White House grounds was crowded that morning by a parade of American tourists from all over the nation. The men, women and children, in family groups, were lined up for two blocks, waiting quietly to enter the presidential mansion, drawn there by the ancient myth of the republic, hushed by the memory of its dead leaders, of such men as Lincoln, the two Roosevelts and Kennedy.

At the gate polite guards glanced at the men, examined the women's hand bags in cursory fashion and joked with the children. Slowly the parade moved into the east wing of the president's temporary home. But these nameless citizens did not see him. He was somewhere in the sealed west or business wing, grappling alone, as all presidents must, with problems that he had not foreseen and, like all statesmen in a chaotic world, could not yet fully comprehend.

Too Complex

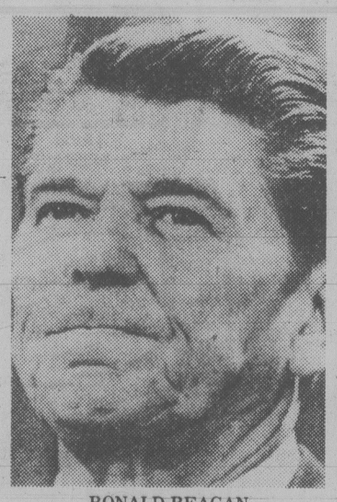
Nor could anyone comprehend the real meaning of the parable. American democracy, symbolized by its chief magistrate and its humble voters, has become too complex, too changeable and too bewildered for ready comprehension. Only historians of later time will comprehend it and then dimly.

That much the smiling but solitary man in the west wing has learned, with all his mistakes, achievements and recent success, after two years of harsh on-the-job training. He also remains mysterious — the born again Christian who prays regularly to his God, cunningly manipulates his vast political apparatus and sees no conflict between his mystical faith and his soaring ambition.

This private paradox is not the business of the White House tourists but they know, in a vague way, the public record of Jimmy Carter. They know, and the opinion polls reflect their judgment, that he made a good start in his election campaign of 1976, a bad start in his presidency and, in the last six months, a sudden recovery with a return of confidence in himself.

The Panama Canal treaty, the Camp David conference, the bold, high-risk economic decision of Nov. 1, the vetoes of pork barrel legislation all show that he has learned by his early blunders, his misconception of his powers and his limitations, as he candidly admits. Now, at mid-passage in his first term, a vital turning point, he has won a kind of suspended verdict from the people, a brief reprieve, perhaps time enough to re-think his often contradictory policies and win a second term in 1980.

That chance will depend heavily on the budget which he will present to congress in January — a budget not merely of figures but of far more important basic intentions.



RONALD REAGAN
. . . demonstrates GOP's bankruptcy

The president who once promised to balance the budget in his first term seeks desperately to reduce the annual deficit to about $30 billion from the current $40 billion. However he manages these inflationary forces, the new budget for the fiscal year beginning next October will dominate the national economy until the eve of the 1980 election. The nation — and its foreign friends — must live with it. The president must swim or sink with it.

Detailed figures can be left to the experts of the various departments, since no single man can possibly understand all of them. What the president has to decide is a question at once simpler and more dangerous to him and the nation alike (the same question facing Prime Minister Trudeau).

How should the president spend the next two years, apart from foreign affairs? Should he try to appease the great pressure groups of a divided, confused and skeptical society — the powerful lobbies of big business and labor, the Jewish community, the blacks, the many ethnic clusters and the rest? Or should he stand firm on his doctrine of "austerity," accept slow economic growth and bitter criticism from all sides because, as he says, the alternative is an economy re-inflated and later plunged into a recession, or worse?

In short, the president at mid-passage must go for broke, trusting the good sense of the unorganized majority of the people who are outside the pressure groups, concerned mainly with their own little lives and, as every poll agrees, fear inflation more than any other threat.

Little Opposition

If Carter was unlucky in his first year he (like Trudeau) is lucky in his opposition. The Republican party that brought Lincoln to the White House, and ruled the republic for a long time afterward, now represents a minority, was terribly wounded by the Watergate affair, is controlled at the top by old, disappointed men and has yet to find a credible candidate for 1980.

When it can even consider the nomination of Ronald Reagan, Gerald Ford or the ex-Democrat, John Connally, its leadership drought is apparent to everyone. But the Republicans may have luck, too, and find a winning candidate in the younger generation. If Carter makes the wrong choice in the next few months, follows the easy way of appeasement and reaches the next election discredited by his performance, his presidency will be written off as a failure both of wisdom and courage.

Anything can happen in politics, of course, in two unpredictable years. What cannot be allowed to happen without worldwide, disastrous consequences is the drift of the American economy toward a false prosperity and then a bust. There is much more than that, however, to the autumn parable and the grim test now immediately ahead of Jimmy Carter

Sound Practice

In writing his steady flow of letters to your newspaper, I can only surmise that Mr. D.M. Trew's objective is to promote a reaction from your readers in order that he can continue his correspondence with you. I note that there have been few replies to these letters but the content of his second-to-last letter was just too much.

In this letter he deplored the emphasis on reforestation in B.C. and charged that no other region in the world relied on the "log-plant" philosophy as much as B.C. This is absolutely untrue. The fact is that every major wood-producing region in the world is involved in massive reforestation programs following logging. For example, Finland, Sweden, Russia, and the United States are placing ever-increasing emphasis on their reforestation programs and the planting of their forest lands following the final harvest phase.

I never expected to be replying to a letter from anyone calling for a decreased emphasis on reforestation programs. No one disputes the fact that it is sound silvicultural practice to harvest some forests, such as our interior dry belt Douglas Fir — Yellow Pine uneven-aged forests, on a "selection" system. However, it is equally sound practice to harvest nature's even-aged mature forests in a method that encompasses a commitment to replant the area.

Again, this is the policy of all the world's major wood-producing countries, even in Scandinavia where some earlier attempts to do otherwise have been labeled as the "green delusion" by many. — W. Young, 6401 Conconi Place.

Support Symphony

It has been noticed that in all of the hammering, repetitive commercials for the Western Lottery, not a word is spoken of the uses to which the monies earned are to be applied. Starting out with a promise of sports and cultural support, we are all aware that some of the money has ben diverted for quite other purposes.

At a time when the members of our symphony orchestra are being asked to step away down in their salaries, the above practice is particularly objectionable. To play in the orchestra is a job — not just a pleasurable hobby as the uncultured politicians think.

I think there should be a published accounting of the whole lottery financing — intake and outgo, not by the Socreds, but an outside agency, and the public should be able to see for themselves where the funds have gone.

This government is missing a golden opportunity to gain the support and gratitude of a large part of the community in bypassing the crunch the arts in the community are experiencing rather than giving concrete and reliably ongoing support. Once the orchestra is dismantled, it will require much effort to rebuild it.

Governments, and even individual leaders, are remembered more for support to the arts which go on into the future carrying their name, than for road extensions, sewers, education, medical care — all of which, as I list them, don't seem to be adding much lustre to the present authority anyway. Why not cut the members and ministers salaries by one-third and put the money saved into the symphony coffers?

On the same subject, but another branch, I am bewildered by the sudden appearance of the music centre theatre at the university which was constructed with public monies, when financing even of repairs, let alone for construction of an arts centre downtown is so difficult to come by. That it is part of the requirements of the music department at the university I can understand, but how it is being allowed to compete with commercial theatres, I cannot. — J. Murray, Victoria.

Long Division Soon An 'Historical Artifact'?

By FRED M. HECHINGER
New York Times

The mathematics shall inherit the earth, and a little calculator shall lead them. That seems to be the essence of a message to students, parents and mathematics teachers from Prof. Bruce R. Vogeli, chairman of the Department of Mathematics, Statistics and Computing in Education at Teachers College, Columbia University.

Vogeli is convinced that American schools, and, subsequently the nation's decision-makers, are on the threshold of a revolution — "a quantum leap" he calls it — that is about to begin in thousands of mathematics classes.

"Major changes in the teaching of mathematics will be brought about by the hardware," he predicts. "A computer that only Bell Telephone could afford 15 years ago, I just bought for my teenage son. I want him to be prepared for what I see coming."

What Vogeli sees coming is a world where "the gathering of data is king." When decisions are made on the basis of analysis of the data, he says, "mathematics will be the power brokers of the future."

Heady stuff for the seventh grader who is struggling with long division. Stop struggling, Vogeli says. Calculators will render obsolete most of the "pen and pencil skills" of present-day mathematics.

Teachers will not spend year after year on "the recipe approach" to mathematics that, Vogeli insists, has created a "mathematically illiterate population that avoids the use of mathematics because it's afraid of it."

"Someday," he predicts, "long division will be taught just the way Roman numerals are today — as historical artifacts, interesting but not very useful."

Objections are predictably raised when Vogeli, who represents a rapidly growing school of mathematical pedagogy, propounds his New New Math.

What will happen to the "basic skills"? Will a generation of youngsters be unable to do simple computations? What about mathematics drills as a means of toughening up the muscles of the mind? And what about the fictitious youngster who, on arriving home from school, tells his mother: "What a day in math! My calculator broke down, and I had to think!"

Vogeli replies that, first and foremost, mastery of the basic computational skills must still precede these giant steps into the new world. He would not introduce calculators before the fourth grade, until pupils have mastered addition and multiplication, subtraction and simple division.

"Memorization of the skills will be important, but they will be put to different use," Vogeli says. Rapid "estimation" based on these skills is crucial for quick checks to determine whether the calculator's answers are credible and not the result of hitting wrong keys.

No intelligent calculator user, he adds, would waste time turning to the machine to get the answer to "13-times-5" types of questions, when old-fashioned reliance on memory would be more efficient.

What if the computer breaks down or the batteries run out? Vogeli suggests the same sort of approach as to a washing machine that goes on the blink: "You don't go back to the scrubbing board; you use a laundromat until the repairman comes."

Parents and teachers should understand, Vogeli insists, that trade-offs are part of any dramatic change. "Some of the old values will be lost, but new values will replace them," he says.

At present, he estimates, three-fourths of all classroom time in math is spent on pencil "recipe" exercises; in the calculator curriculum, unprecedented amounts of instructional time will be available for understanding mathematics.

"Under the present system," he adds, "most graduates can't really apply their pencil-pushing training to the solving of actual problems after they leave school. The calculator curriculum will lead to greater competence in applying mathematics to real problems."

Vogeli does not challenge the caution voiced by the Council for Basic Education in its November bulletin that "calculators — like television — can be used constructively in teaching and learning, or used to avoid both."

A revolution in the classroom

He is concerned about many teachers' capacities to make the quantum jump without a great deal of guidance. But he has the support of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics, which called for the introduction of calculators in the middle grades, after students have been taught "basics".

Part of the popular resistance, he anticipates, will come from those who believe that good education must be unpleasant and that anything that promises to make math easier must be bad. Since there are now more calculators than people, Vogeli says, the consumer has already made a decision, and teachers will come around.

"If the brain requires exercise," he adds, "analysis is a more profitable exercise than pencil-pushing."

Keep Those Digits Secret!

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

When social insurance numbers were introduced in Canada in the mid-1960s many Canadians felt uneasy. The more individualistic protested the idea of becoming a mere number while others foresaw the possibility of privacy being invaded.

Even though the government of the day denied that a person's number would become an ID card, recent events suggest otherwise.

Evidence before the McDonald commission into RCMP wrongdoing this summer confirmed that the social insurance card has become a universal identification system number.

Moreover, the commission was told that since most Canadians now have to have a social insurance number, it is used by a variety of data banks to file a wide range of personal information. The RCMP alone was given confidential data from more than 1,600 social insurance files during the past four years.

Originally, social insurance numbers became mandatory for the 4.5 million Canadians then eligible for unemployment insurance. Now, however, many school systems require students to have a social insurance number. It is also necessary for medical care. The list of those demanding it for identification purposes grows — public libraries, banks and trust companies, even some minor hockey associations.

Critics fear that if data held under social insurance numbers is brought together, it would result in a cradle-to-grave identification system that would reveal more personal information than anyone has the right to know in a free society.

And yet last week in the Commons, Health Minister Monique Begin said that in future social insurance numbers will be used more and more to protect a $14 billion-a-year federal social services program against people who cheat.

"More computers are being used in every department," said Miss Begin, "whether provincial or federal."

Her concern over people who cheat on unemployment insurance and welfare — the two main areas where there are instances of abuse — is understandable, even if it possesses the ring of being politically fashionable at the moment.

But the endorsement of Big Brother techniques as a means of curbing or eliminating abuse of social services in effect poses the question: What price privacy?

In a democracy, the answer is obvious: Privacy is priceless.

Accordingly, the federal government should heed the urgings of Tory MP Ray Hnatyshyn to introduce legislative guidelines to protect Canadians against the abuse of their social insurance files.

There's obviously been too much abuse already.

What to Look for in Tomorrow's Leaders

By JOHN W. GARDNER

(Gardner is the founding chairman of 'Common Cause', the U.S. citizens' lobby. He wrote this for the London Observer)

Is it time to revise our ideas of leadership? In the past our imagination has been seized by the larger-than-life, charismatic leader who towers above his contemporaries, enjoys great personal renown, and leads in the grand style.

Such leadership, however, at least in the democracies, may become increasingly rare. For one thing, it may simply not be capable of dealing with the multiple, interlocking systems that characterize today's social organizations. And our preoccupation with the "story-book" leader may block our recognition of other, more relevant forms of leadership.

There are today many and varied leadership functions that must be performed if a society is to solve its largest, most basic problems. Take what could be described as clarifying and defining functions.

Some problems — urban decay in rich countries, for example, neglect of agriculture in poor ones — can really be solved only by changing the nature of society itself. Social change is a particularly untidy way of solving problems. It occurs through a long and disorderly process in which, like an infant learning to walk, society tries, fails, learns, has partial successes, bumps its nose, tries again.

Clarifiers and definers cannot solve the problem in advance and then, to vary the metaphor slightly, hand us a road map showing the way. What they can do is identify promising first steps. Later, as action is undertaken, they appraise its effectiveness, tell us when we've succeeded and when we've gone up blind alleys.

Then there are implementers. These are the people who take on the management of the disorderly process of change. They activate existing institutions, redesign them, or invent new ones; they create new coalitions and fight off the people who don't want the problem solved. Next there are the mobilisers, who have to build up the social morale necessary to undertake such arduous endeavors. Someone has to call for the kind of effort and restraint, drive and discipline that make for great performance. Someone has to help people know what they can be at their best. Someone has to create some measure of unity.

Most important, perhaps, is the function of renewal. Too often, on the long road up, young leaders become "servants of what is" rather than "shapers of what might be". In the process of learning how the system works, they are rewarded for playing within the intricate structure of existing rules. By the time they reach the top they are likely to be trained prisoners of the structure.

This is not all bad; every vital system reaffirms itself. But no system can stay vital for long unless some of its leaders remain sufficiently independent to help it to change and grow. There are many brilliant administrators, but only a few are renewers.

I would suggest that Jean Monnet is a far truer model of the leader of the future than Charles de Gaulle. The most effective leadership will be provided by an individual, or better yet, a loosely-linked group of individuals with:

* The patience to work in a context of complexity and pluralism;

* The intellectual clarity to conceptualise a working consensus;

* The integrity to win the trust of contending forces;

* The persuasiveness to mobilize willing allies in pursuit of goals that are tolerable for all.

Such leaders will be needed at many levels of society, in many parts of an organization, scattered throughout the various sub-systems. The old hierarchical model is useless. We can't expect top leaders, working alone, to "make the thing go." "The thing" won't respond to their command any more because it's no longer a "thing".

It is a great many things, innumerable sub-systems loosely related in ever-changing configurations. And the organization (or society) must not only gain some modest control of its own inner complexity; it must also weave innumerable ties with other organizations (or societies) that interrelate with it.

What we need is people ready to take the initiative in improving social functioning, re-weaving connections between warring sub-systems, and offering new designs for malfunctioning processes.

There are many young people with the ability, temperament and inclination to reach strategic positions for action along the lines I have discussed. Society's task is to identify them early and provide them with the kind of experience that will strengthen them for the work they must do.

One fundamental outranks all others: they must be exposed to experiences that broaden their horizons, lift them out of their specialities, introduce them to other worlds and other views.

Leaders have always been generalists. Tomorrow's leaders will very likely have begun their working lives as trained specialists, but to mature as leaders they must put that phase behind them. Only as generalists can they cope with the multiple, highly-organized groups, sub-systems within the larger systems, each fighting for special treatment, often to the point of paralysing any significant actions.

A Nice Cup of Tea?

katharine whitehorn

LONDON — The news has just hit Britain that tea, the national drink, may actually be bad for you. Some people, it seems, suffer an allergy to it; it makes them twitch and irritable, gives them strange malaises and unexplained headaches. And all over the country the cry is going up: "But how can anyone live without their tea?"

Darned well, that's how they can live. If you ask me, tea is the national blight and I'm simply delighted if there's any sort of medical case to be made out against it. For if there is one thing that puts more strains on British family life than anything else, it is this appalling prevalence of tea.

The British insist on believing that a nice cup of tea will cure, or solve, anything. Civil defence is organized so that one in five persons will know, not how to dodge bombs or bind wounds, but to put a candle in a flower-pot and heat water for tea. And I saw a boat dangerously adrift in a lock once, with a child fallen into the water; and what was the mother of the child saying? "Someone put on a kettle for a cup of tea."

Every time I have my mother or my mother-in-law to stay it is the same. They need a cup of tea to wake them up. They have a cup of tea with breakfast. Just as you've got over that, they have something in the middle of the morning — tea, perhaps. After lunch, at tea-time, and even (since my mother comes from Scotland) at ten in the evening another cup is required. You send up a cry of joy when your last baby is finally off two-hourly feeds and on to proper meals and then your elder relations on their two-hourly schedule come to stay and you're back where you started.

Why are the geriatric wards of Britain full to bursting? Why is Granny-bashing on the increase? Why do not families cherish their old folk any more? Not because they've suddenly become hard-hearted, but just because bundling the old party into the old folks home is the only way any woman can ever find the time to do anything except spend her life making the flaming tea.

And that's quite apart from the hidden irritations about how you make it. My mother favors China tea, because her father (a Presbyterian minister) once helped a widow's son to a job in a tea company, and he sent a great chest of the stuff from the Far East every Christmas. My mother-in-law, on the other hand, likes raw strong Indian, the kind you can stand the spoon up in, which revolts me.

My mother-in-law thinks tea-bags are very sluttish; I think the stuff's so nasty anyway you might at least let yourself off the horrible business of getting the leaves out of the pot.

None of this is ever expressed directly; it just festers within us, poisoning relationships as their three-days-fermented tea was supposed to poison the fellahin of Egypt.

The wretched stuff was apparently first brought to Europe by some blighted Dutchman in the 17th century; by 1700 it had moved across the Channel to England and dug in at all social levels — if you were poor, you bought used tea-leaves second hand from the servants of the rich.

William Cobbett, author of Rural Rides, who disapproved of just about everything, wrote a century later, "It is impossible to make a fire, boil water and make tea, drink it, wash up the things, sweep up the fireplace and put all to right again in less space of time than two hours . . . besides the waste of a man's time hanging about waiting for the tea."

Waste of a man's time indeed; what about the waste of the woman's time who cooks it?

Of course the handful of tea-leaves, the screwed-up paper with sugar, the small bottle of milk — your "mash" — is a traditional part of a workman's gear; men have gone on strike for months for their right to come all the way down from the top of a crane in order to have their tea-break.

The theory used to be that this was actually a euphemism for natural functions which could not be directly mentioned in the hearing of a man's gentlemanly employer; but since "piss off" is now an accepted part of the language of industrial negotiation, we must assume that they really are talking about tea.

But now that it may be bad for you, I can take quite a different line. "Tea?" Oh no — I mean, yes, I'd love to have something to drink, like chocolate or whisky or methylated spirits; but you don't still drink tea, do you? Tea? No, I wouldn't have it in the house.

B.C. Food-Cost Increase Near 1%, Survey Shows

The price of food in B.C increased by slightly less than one per cent during the four-week period ending Nov. 18, a supermarket survey by the provincial agriculture ministry shows.

The ministry, which makes the purchases and comparisons in Vancouver, said the increase was caused by an 11.8-per-cent hike in the price of fresh fruit, which had declined sharply in October.

The latest survey found that food in B.C. was 10.8 per cent higher than one year ago and 21.3 per cent higher than the same period in 1976.

In Ottawa, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Warren Allmand said food companies may be summoned before the federal government to explain why their profits have been soaring.

The Ontario consumer and commercial relations ministry said it will begin monitoring food prices next year at the producer, wholesale and retail levels and will make the information public.

The B.C. study found the price of processed fruit increased by eight per cent, which it said reflected the increased costs of processing 1978 fruit.

Canned orange juice and apple juice increased 16 per cent at the retail level.

Pork went up by five per cent over the previous four weeks, with sausages and loin chops increasing by 10 cents a pound at the retail level, the study said.

"The anticipated decline in pork prices has been eliminated this year as the heavy demand for pork as a beef substitute continues."

The study found the largest decline in the four-week period was for beef, which decreased by four per cent at the retail level.

"However, beef prices are expected to remain constant or increase through the new year."

Higher Import Quotas Defended

RICHMOND (CP) — Any increase in import quotas for foodstuffs should not harm Canadian producers, Warren Allmand, federal minister of consumer and corporate affairs, said Wednesday.

Just as food producers are protected against unduly low prices for their products through marketing boards, the consumer should be shielded from unduly high prices when demand is strong by adjusting those quotas, he said.

Addressing the British Columbia Federation of Agriculture's annual convention, Allmand said it was time for marketing agencies to show consumers "the often-talked about benefits of supply management."

He said trade measures offer one means of giving consumers some help. Beef prices, for example, show that serious consideration should be given to increasing or suspending the import quota in 1979.

Allmand said that as consumer and corporate affairs minister he was concerned that prices of cheaper cuts of beef have been rising more rapidly than those of better cuts and this hits hardest "the low-income consumers who are already under considerable pressure from inflation."

Canadian beef producers are not producing enough of B, C, and D grades of beef to fill the demands of fast-food chains and therefore imports of lower-quality beef are required, he said.

He said beef producers would not be hurt by such a change because statistics show most of this beef in 1978 was used in fast-food chains and does not compete directly with domestically-produced Grade A beef.

Allmand said import and other industry spokesmen have called for an increase in the beef quota for 1979 to about 250 million pounds from 100 million pounds this year.

The minister also said producers must expect to make concessions on imported products if Canada is to have access to other markets for its exports.

Don Knoerr, federation vice-president and director of the B.C. Cattlemen's Association, told Allmand that the federal government has not been consistent in its import quota system.

No Turkey Price-Gouging in Province, Hewitt Says

Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt says the cost of turkeys in B.C. is not unreasonable and producers are not stockpiling the birds in efforts to raise the price for Christmas.

In Ontario, Frank Drea, consumer and commercial relations minister, has suggested that shoppers stop buying turkeys to halt price increases and curb excessive profits by turkey wholesalers.

"I believe in B.C. our inventories are not higher then they were last year, which indicates that we are dealing with the current market situation," Hewitt said in an interview.

"I don't think there is any price-gouging here at all."

Meanwhile, Warren Allmand, federal minister of consumer and corporate affairs, told the B.C. agriculture federation annual convention Wednesday in Richmond that he would like to see the National Farm Products Marketing Council instruct marketing agencies to change quotas to meet demand for turkeys.

The minister later told a press conference held in conjunction with the convention that he was not aware of the continent-wide shortage of turkeys this year.

According to federal government figures, stocks only were 50 million pounds as of Nov. 1, compared with 72 million pounds for the same period a year ago.

Praises Boards

RICHMOND (CP) — A recent legislature committee report condemning British Columbia marketing boards contains errors, out-of-date information and omits new developments, provincial Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt said Wednesday.

Food producers and distributors, however, should learn from the report's valid criticisms and not tear it apart, he said.

Hewitt made the remarks to about 300 delegates at the 15th annual convention of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture.

Hewitt said the final report of the committee will be factual and will point out changes that should be made.

Sewage Disposal Plant For Penticton Backed

PENTICTON (CP) — An engineering consultant said Wednesday that the city's proposed sewage disposal station would be more efficient and desirable than continuing to dump treated sewage into Skaha Lake through the Okanagan River channel.

Steve Lackey made the statement during a break in the first day of hearings into the city's appeal of a Pollution Control Board permit granted last year.

Last September, the city applied to the board to increase its sewage discharge into Skaha Lake to four million gallons daily from 1.8 million gallons but the board ruled that Penticton could discharge only three million gallons daily.

Treated sewage now is pumped into Okanagan River and flows on the surface into Skaha Lake.

Gets Year for Killing Brother

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Victoria man who shot and killed his brother near Vanderhoof, in May was sentenced Wednesday in British Columbia Supreme Court to one year in prison.

Donald Glen Boudreau, 27, was found guilty of manslaughter Sept. 21 by a Supreme Court jury in Prince George.

He was originally charged with second-degree murder after Larry Gerald Boudreau, 27, was shot twice while lying in bed in a cabin seven kilometres south of Vanderhoof.

Suspended Sentence for Zaks

RICHMOND (CP) — Peter Zaks, one of four people charged with theft from the Richmond Friendship Home Society, was given a one-year suspended sentence Wednesday in provincial court.

Zaks, who earlier had pleaded guilty to the charge, was also ordered to make restitution of $921.

Meanwhile, former family court judge David Hart, the society's president, was committed to county court trial on two counts of theft over $200.

The charges were laid after a Richmond RCMP investigation of complaints that 17 per cent of the society's annual $250,000 provincial grant was missing.

Slide Victims Inquest Slated

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — An inquest will be held Monday into the deaths of two British Columbia Railway workers who died after a mudslide near here Oct. 30.

Francisco Mastroianni, 46, was buried in the slide on the BCR tracks, which run between here and the Northwood pulp mill. He died while being rushed to hospital.

Efrem Violato, 52, died of an apparent heart attack during attempts to rescue Mastroianni.

Bushes Hid Crossing: Jury

DELTA (CP) — A coroner's jury recommended Wednesday that signals at a railway crossing in this Vancouver suburb be made more visible after an inquest into an Aug. 21 car-train crash which claimed four lives.

Killed in the crash were Gerald and Allan Kline and Valerie Botchar, all of the Vancouver area, and Daniel Thorne of Prince George.

The jury, while attaching no blame, found that bushes and poles obscuring visibility of the signals were probably a contributing factor.

Gov't Can Discipline B.C. Judges: Barrett

NDP leader Dave Barrett said Wednesday the provincial cabinet and not the Judicial Council of B.C. has the authority to discipline provincial judges.

The government has said the cabinet lost its authority to the judicial council in 1975 following changes to the Provincial Courts Act by the then NDP government.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom says the legislation is under study and may be revised at the next session of the legislature.

"It is the cabinet that signs orders-in-council appointing judges, it is the cabinet that can sign orders-in-council getting rid of judges," Barrett said in an interview.

"The judicial council can advise, can suggest, can hope, can buy lottery tickets. It can do a lot of things — but it can't sign orders-in-council."

The cabinet is to consider Monday transcripts of an inquiry by the judicial council into the affairs of provincial court Judge Erik Bendrodt.

During the inquiry, Bendrodt admitted to being an alcoholic and to having picked up a teen-aged prostitute.

The council found the judge's actions regrettable, but recommended to cabinet that no further action be taken.

Barrett said any judge with an alcohol problem should be kept off the bench, and perhaps Bendrodt should be given a leave-of-absence.

Tory leader Vic Stephens, a lawyer, said cabinet should not have the final say on the removal of judges because it already has too much power.

However, he said, there are too many lawyers on the judicial council.

RCMP Shooting Account Contradicted

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A second civilian witness has given testimony which conflicts with RCMP accounts of the fatal shooting Sept. 25 of a Prince George man.

Charles Herman Demery, 24, was struck once in the skull by a police bullet fired at the end of an eight-kilometre chase at speeds up to 120 kilometres an hour through city streets. He died the following day in hospital.

Barney Skakun said Wednesday that he heard four shots after a police car rammed Demery's pickup truck from behind, stopping the truck.

Skakun's testimony conflicted with that of Constable Serge Pepin, who testified Tuesday that he got out of his cruiser and fired four shots at the truck's rear tire as the truck sped away.

A ballistics expert said Monday that Pepin's gun fired the fatal shot. Pepin said he also fired two shots earlier while Demery's truck was on a lawn, trying to get around two police cars which had blocked its flight.

Other evidence showed that Constable Gary Harvey fired three other shots at the truck.

Skakun said he was outside his residence when a pickup truck pursued by five police cars went past and disappeared from sight.

He said he heard two shots, then the truck reappeared, pursued by one of the police cars.

The cruiser rammed the left rear of the pickup, spinning it in the road, and stopping it, then four shots rang out, Skakun said.

His testimony, with two exceptions, corroborated that of Carmen Price, who testified Tuesday.

She said four police cars followed the pickup and the truck was rammed, not only from the rear, but also from the front.

Skakun said he watched the incident from about 130 metres and walked to the scene shortly after. He said he remained there until after the ambulance took Demery away.

He said he had not seen police smashing the door windows of the pickup to get inside, and had not seen police giving first aid to the victim, as Allan Hope, Pepin's lawyer, said other witnesses would testify.

Earlier evidence showed there was a bullet hole in the rear window of the pickup behind the driver's seat. The hole was larger than a bullet normally would make on first contact with glass, indicating it had ricocheted before striking the glass.

Both Pepin and Harvey have been put on desk duty pending the outcome of the inquest which resumes Tuesday.

Blind Make Own Marks

CARACAS (AP) — Blind Venezuelans are refusing to vote in Sunday's presidential election with assistance and have developed their own method to keep their votes secret, says the newspaper El Nacional.

A national conference of the blind this week protested the Supreme Electoral Council's refusal to provide ballots in braille. Hector Morillo, one of the delegates, said about 6,000 blind voters will use a special cardboard template to cover the ballot, allowing them to mark it without help.

15 Years For Heroin Trafficking

VANCOUVER (CP) — Chung Kok Kwun, 26, of Hong Kong was sentenced to 15 years in prison Wednesday after pleading guilty last week to possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

He was arrested in a September raid on a suburban Burnaby apartment where 72 bags of heroin were seized. The heroin had an estimated street value of $2 million.

Kwun's lawyer told the court the accused had lost his life's savings gambling in Hong Kong and had agreed to act as a heroin courier. He said that despite the $2 million street value of the drug, his client was to be paid only $2,000 after the heroin was delivered here.

McCarthy Denies Lottery Charges

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said Wednesday the latest opposition charges concerning the government's handling of lottery profits are nonsense and ludicrous.

"It's sheer political fluff from Mrs. Dailly," the minister said.

Burnaby North NDP MLA Eileen Dailly said Tuesday a partial list of recipients of grants from the profits show most of the grants went to ridings represented by Social Credit MLAs.

She said 32 grants worth $1.5 million went to Social Credit ridings, while NDP constituencies received only two grants valued at $100,000.

McCARTHY
. . . 'political fluff'

Mrs. Dailly said the breakdown proves the Social Credit government is using the grants for political patronage.

"We don't ask people what their constituency is and what their political leanings are when they call for lottery funds," said Mrs. McCarthy.

"We look at the project and the worthiness of the project."

She said that of the $1.5 million in grants mentioned by Mrs. Dailly, close to $1 million went towards construction of a therapeutic pool in Vancouver that will serve the whole Greater Vancouver area.

The minister said there may be more grants to Social Credit ridings because the people elected more Social Credit MLAs in the last election.

WILLIAMS REJECTS SCHOOL-STRIKE LAW

Labor Minister Allan Williams ruled out Wednesday the possibility of using essential services legislation to end the strike-lockout in West Kootenay school districts.

Earlier this week, Education Minister Pat McGeer said he was considering asking the cabinet to have the schools declared an essential service if the labor dispute is not settled within a couple of weeks.

Williams said the school dispute is not covered by the essential services legislation. Separate back-to-work legislation would be needed, and he is not considering such a move or any other form of back-to-work order at this time.

The minister said he expects a report from mediator Clark Gilmour on Friday, and will consider then what steps can be taken to resolve the strike-lockout.

Williams said he can understand the concern of parents, and does not want the dispute to go on any longer than necessary, but he does not have the legislative power to end it — and can only promise to do everything possible to resolve it as quickly as possible.

Bus drivers, clerical and maintenance staff, represented by the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE), went on strike Oct. 26 in the Nelson school district and at Selkirk College in Castlegar. CUPE employees were locked out in Grand Forks, Trail and Castelgar school districts.

Prince George Dropout Rate 'Spectacular,

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Area high schools and the College of New Caledonia should work together to stop high school students from quitting school, says college principal Charles McCaffray.

He told a school board committee meeting Tuesday that the 35-per-cent drop-out rate among students in Grades 8 to 12 is "spectacular."

"You are losing them, and we (the college) are failing to draw them back," the told the board.

However, Bruce Strachan, school board chairman, said Wednesday that a lot of those who quit school go into jobs.

He said there is an abundance of high-paying skilled and unskilled jobs in the area which don't require a high school education.

BONDS

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were fractionally lower in moderate trading on the Canadian bond market Wednesday. The short end of the market was unchanged. Mid-, long-term, and provincial issues fell one-eighth of a point. Corporate issues remained the same. Day-to-day money was available at 9¾ per cent.

U.K. Charter Firm Buys Boeing 737s

LONDON (AP) — Britannia Airways, a British charter company, ordered three more Boeing 737 jetliners today worth a total of $36 million.

The order is part of a major build-up by the airline which says it will be operating 27 of the U.S. twin jets by 1981—making it the world's fourth-largest operator of the aircraft.

Announcement of the order in London coincided with acceptance by Britannia's managing director, David Davison, of its 18th Boeing 737 at the Boeing facility in Seattle.

Davidson, as quoted by the company here, said the airline will carry about three million passengers from 22 British airports on holiday flights next year and is considering buying larger aircraft to fly alongside its 737 fleet.

Britannia, he said, "is very interested in the Boeing 767," a 200-seater medium-range aircraft, costing about $26 million.

Boeing was quoted as saying that the Britannia order for three more 737s increased total orders for the aircraft to 635, including 96 so far this year.

MYSTERY ABITIBI BUYER

TORONTO (CP) — A mystery buyer has acquired another 505,000 shares of Abitibi Paper Co., Canada's largest newsprint producer.

The unidentified buyer purchased the shares Tuesday through the brokerage firm of Thomson Kernaghan and Co. Ltd.

Together with 900,000 shares purchased Monday, the acquisition, worth about $25 million, represents about 7.75 per cent of the issued Abitibi shares.

Speculation was that the buyer is Consolidated-Bathurst Ltd. of Montreal, which holds 1,011,000 shares of Price Ltd. of Quebec, a subsidiary of Abitibi.

Abitibi stock is traded at $18 a share, the price paid by the mystery buyer.

Ex-FBI Spy With Space Firm

OTTAWA (CP) — Warren Hart, a former FBI agent who says he once spied on black militant groups in Canada for the RCMP, now works on the Caribbean island of Antigua for Space Research Corp., a company suspected of shipping arms to South Africa, company officials say.

Space Research lawyer Don Affleck said Hart was hired recently as a youth organizer to help "defuse" leftist protests against the company's presence on the island.

Conservative MP Elmer Mackay confirmed this version but other company officials gave vague accounts of Hart's activities.

Black Rhodesian leader Joshua Nkomo, the BBC and the CBC have alleged that Space Research has been using Antigua as a relay point for arms shipments to South Africa. This has been firmly denied by the company.

Canada, a participant in an international arms boycott against South Africa, has ordered an RCMP investigation of suspected violations by the company, based in Highwater, Que. British and United States authorities are also looking into the allegations.

Earlier this year, Mackay identified Hart, 41, as an RCMP informer whose assignment was to infiltrate black groups, some from the Caribbean, who were engaged in militant protests in Montreal during the early 1970s.

After the affair came to light in the Commons last February, Hart signed an affidavit saying he also met an RCMP request to carry out the electronic bugging of former solicitor-general Warren Allmand and New Democratic MP Juan Rodrigez.

In a telephone interview from Toronto with The Canadian Press, lawyer Affleck confirmed that Hart is drawing a salary in Antigua as a community worker responsible for organizing steel bands, soccer and basketball teams among young people.

"It was an attempt to defuse protests by leftist groups in Antigua against the arrival of Space Research," Affleck said.

Hart's job was hired to organize young people on the theory that "the protests arose because they didn't have enough to do."

Mackay contended Hart was hired to handle public relations for Space Research. He "has experience with radical groups" and his work with the RCMP proves he is one of "the best agents" in calming protest movements.

John Kieran, vice-president for public relations at Space Research, told a different story, saying Hart was employed in Antigua as a bookkeeper for an undisclosed salary.

Linda Hovey, personnel officer for the company's U.S. subsidiary, based just across the Quebec border in Vermont, said Hart was hired April 3, 1978, as a community organizer.

Wille Lefuich, Hart's lawyer in Washington, D.C., said he knew that his client was working in the "security" area, but he had no information Hart was in Antigua.

Japanese Role Studied

OTTAWA (CP) — The immigration and fisheries departments are studying how many Japanese technicians are needed for next spring's herring roe fishery off British Columbia, David McEachran, assistant deputy fisheries minister, said today.

McEachran told the Commons fisheries committee the government wants to make sure the technicians stick to supervisory and observer roles.

Union officials complained last spring that Japanese technicians were doing jobs which Canadians could fill and the number of temporary work permits should be cut.

Japan is the main market for the valuable herring eggs and the Japanese companies insist they need their specially-trained technicians to ensure they get top-grade roe.

Fire Deliberately Set

Arson was the probable cause of a fire that resulted in more than $150,000 to two buildings in James Bay Nov. 22, Victoria fire officials said today.

Deputy fire chief Mike Heppell said that although tests on debris found at the scene have not been completed, the consensus among investigators is the fire was deliberately set.

The fire broke out at the back of a 12-suite apartment at 101 Menzies and quickly engulfed the rear portion, spreading to a rooming house next door on Niagara.

Investigators originally thought the fire started under a rear porch, but now they believe it started on the porch deck.

Heppell said there was no logical heat source. Even if a cigarette had been carelessly thrown on the deck the fire would not have spread as rapidly as it did, he said.

Firemen found a container at the scene and suspect it may have contained a flammable liquid.

The apartment block is owned by hotelman David Bowman, and lawyer Edward Popham.

Heppell said the loss was insured.

Meanwhile, firemen have concluded their investigation into a fire that caused about $40,000 to a house at 1941 Ashgrove Tuesday morning.

Heppell said the blaze started spontaneously among some commercial art materials in the basement of the building.

PRODUCTION RISES

OTTAWA (CP) — Domestic production of goods and services registered a healthy 1.4 per cent increase in September over the previous month, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

The federal agency's index of real domestic product rose to 134.9 during the month from 133 in August.

Production of goods rose by 2.5 per cent, output of services increased nine-tenths of one per cent and industrial production, which accounts for about 29 per cent of the index, was up 2.8 per cent.

Among goods-producing industries, there were increases in the agriculture, forestry, construction, mining, manufacturing and utilities sectors, with the most significant rises in manufacturing.

Modest gains in dairy and grain production led to a rise of six-tenths of one per cent in agriculture output while forestry production rose by 8.4 per cent, especially due to a recovery in British Columbia.

The construction industry showed an increase in output of 1.8 per cent following four consecutive months of decline. Strikes in the industry which had affected several provinces were resolved by September.

$16M SAWMILL FOR NANAIMO

Pacific Logging Company Ltd. of Victoria and the Mitsibushi Corporation of Tokyo have formed a new company to build a $16 million sawmill in Nanaimo.

Pacific Logging president Bill Sloan was out of town today and unavailable for comment. Pacific Logging is a subsidiary of Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd.

The new firm — to be known as Mayo Forest Products — has acquired the assets of the lumber mill operated by G.W. Dorman Pulp Chip Co. Ltd. on the Nanaimo assembly wharf.

It will be closed at the end of this year and reconstruction of the mill will start almost immediately.

The new mill will be highly automated and in operation by February, 1980.

It will produce 80 million feet board measure (FBM) of lumber a year, mainly for the Japanese market.

The mill now employs about 100 people and produces 35 million FBM of lumber a year. The employees will be offered jobs in the reconstruction of the mill which, when operational, will employ about the same number of people on a two-shift basis.

The new company has also acquired the assets of Mayo Lumber Co. Ltd. in Nanaimo and will continue to operate the company without any changes.

$250,000 Terminal Vandalism

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Vandals caused about $250,000 damage Wednesday to several pieces of heavy equipment located at the Fairview terminal here.

Two $40,000 front-end loaders and a backhoe were dumped into the harbor, while several other pieces of equipment were overturned. The equipment belonged to Canadian Stevedoring Co. Ltd. and the National Harbors Board, which operates the terminal.

Canadian Stevedoring officials said they were worried that the salt water could affect the equipment's electrical system. Attempts were being made to lift the equipment out of the harbor.

CITY, ISLAND GROUPS JOIN HUDDLE ON ENERGY ISSUES

Representatives of Victoria and island citizen groups are in Naramata in the Okanagan forming an organization to deal specifically with energy development issues in B.C.

It will be a grassroot organization with a basic objective to fight for public input in energy policies to be considered soon by federal and provincial governments, according to Carol Sinats, a member of Greenpeace, one of the principal organizers.

Once the organization, to be known as Energy Coalition, has been formed at the three-day meeting, resolutions from societies will be submitted for consideration.

A brief submitted by the Citizen Association to Save the Environment reflects the thinking of many citizens groups of the province.

Its major resolution asks the provincial government to define its short and long-term energy policy. It also asks for the release of a paper on energy submitted by the B.C. Energy Commission earlier this year.

The resolution further requests the Conservative and NDP parties, the B.C. Federation of Labor and the B.C. Chamber of Commerce spell out publicly their energy attitudes.

Derrick Mallard, president of CASE, said the people have every right to know the government's energy policies.

"We are not only interested in hydro electrical power," he said, "but in all other sources of energy ranging from oil to sun power," he said.

Distress Message Phoney

Canadian Coast Guard vessels and a hovercraft searched the Spanish Banks in Vancouver on Tuesday night in response to a phoney distress call.

A spokesman for the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt said it was the second time the caller, who had identified his vessel as the Calico, a Chris-Craft, had called in a fake message. The other call was Oct. 21.

New Police Chef Headed for Jail?

Victoria police are looking into the possibility of preparing meals themselves for prisoners rather than rely on an outside caterer.

Chief Jack Gregory told the police board Wednesday Prince Rupert RCMP recently bought a microwave oven and freezer and have started to provide frozen meals for prisoners as a means of cutting costs. He suggested the same could be done here.

Deputy chief Jim Smith said today a study will be undertaken to determine the cost-savings. The results will be presented at the next meeting of the board on Jan. 10.

At present, prisoner meals are provided by the Highlander Restaurant, 707 Pandora, Monday through to Saturday at a cost of $2.60, $3.10, and $3.50 for breakfast, lunch and dinner. Police have a contract with McDonalds to supply meals on Sundays.

Smith said prisoner meals are not a major cost item, particularly since the provincial court moved to the Burdett Street Law Courts building where custody — and the provision of meals — is the responsibility of the sheriff's service.

U.S. TV Seeking Retaliation

tries were unable to negotiate an agreement on the tax deductibility of advertising time bought by a Canadian on a U.S. TV station.

Along with TV station owners from Buffalo, N.Y., and Bellingham, Wash., Mr. Fisher argued that C-58 now only cut into the revenues of at least 15 stations, bu also "seriously damaged" their asset value.

The Canadian government is adamant in even refusing to negotiate the matter. The purpose of C-58 was to repatriate Canadian advertising money flowing into the U.S. — about $20 million in 1976 — and thus provide more cash for home-grown programming.

Significantly, Ottawa took no official part in yesterday's hearing, saying it should not have to defend its policies before a foreign tribunal.

The U.S. stations are crying foul, saying that Canada freely picks up American broadcasts that "spill" over the border "without compensating the U.S. border stations which provide these services." "In a word," Mr. Fisher said, "it permits piracy of U.S. programming." He added that border broadcasting is a bilateral problem which Canada has decided to treat unilaterally. A group of private Canadian communications executives from Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver appeared before the committee to defend the goals of C-58.

Craig McCoy, a lawyer speaking on their behalf, argued that border broadcasting was "not a trade matter to begin with, and Canada has no obligations, in tax matters or otherwise, to television stations based in the U.S.

"Canadians didn't ask for the TV signals that spill over the border. It was a volunteer thing." Canadian cable companies are free to pick up the stray U.S. transmissions, and feed them to their Canadian customers. The same applies in the U.S.

Past court rulings have held that when TV signals spill over a border, the "receiving" country has sovereign right over how those signals are used.

J. Ronald Mitchell, president and chief executive officer of Moffatt Communications Ltd. In Winnipeg, said C-58 was necessary to counter the "overpowering impact of U.S. programming that has stifled our ability" to produce good Canadian television.

He said U.S. television stations, especially those in Buffalo, had made "windfall profits" from Canadian advertisers in the past, because these advertisers could buy time as easily in the U.S. as in Canada.

But C-58, by removing the tax deductibility of this cross-border advertising, was changing all that. Mr. Mitchell noted that in 1977, the money spent on Canadian programming jumped 25 per cent, largely as a result of C-58.

The members of the U.S. trade committee, who listened to the arguments, appeared somewhat befuddled as the debate turned to the question of whether TV signals could be defined trade items, like wheat and auto parts, and how C-58 could help foster a Canadian identity.

Privately, one of the committee members said during a break in discussions that the call for massive U.S. retaliation was a bit of legal "leverage" and nothing more.

He confided that, based on past experience with such matters, the hearing was unlikely to result in a recommendation one way or the other.

Gov't Missing Top Tourist Lure: Spelunkers

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

The B.C. government is missing out on thousands of extra tourist dollars by refusing to develop the caves and speleological resources on Vancouver Island.

The claim comes from Karen Bischoff, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Speleological Federation, which represents six cave exploring groups, four of which operate on the island.

She singles out a cave near Port McNeil on northern Vancouver Island which could easily be turned into a major attraction.

The cave has a river with sandy banks running through it.

Its spectacular interior glistens with stalactites and stalagmites, limestone formations projecting from the roof of a cave or up from its floor.

"It's like a fairyland," says Bischoff, "It's full of wonders."

If it was properly organized, visitors could tour part of the cave by water since the river through the first cavern is large enough for a boat.

There are waterfalls and moonmilk — soft limestone deposits which glisten — to be seen.

"We even saw pigmented trout swimming in one of the pools," she said.

But Bischoff said the federation fears a logging company will start clear-cutting over the cave, which could spell its doom.

It could result in turbid run-off, causing excessive silting into the cave.

"But this is only one of many caves. So far we have counted more than 650 caverns on the island, making the island the cave mecca of Canada."

She said cavers from other parts of Canada, the United States, Britain and Europe have expressed amazement that the government has done nothing to develop some of the caves as tourist attractions.

"I'm sure people would pay $5 to see some caves," she said.

"Other countries lucky enough to have limestone deposits make use of their caves for tourism, recreation, education and scientific study," she said.

Bischoff said the federation wrote to Forests Minister Tom Waterland, Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf and Tourist Minister Grace McCarthy asking them to manage and protect B.C.'s cave resources but got no response.

She said they approached Alberni NDP MLA Robert Skelly and asked him to urge the government to do something.

"But he was unable to get anywhere with either the forests ministry or the parks branch," she said.

But she added there is at least one government body which sees the tourist and recreational potential of caves.

That's the Mount Waddington Regional District.

The district sponsored a survey of caves in the north of the island with a view to setting aside some as parks or using them for tourism and recreation, she said.

But nothing can be done without the B.C. government's support because the caves are on Crown land.

Bischoff said legislation is needed to protect the caves from being harmed because logging companies have damaged or ruined many caves, clogging or plugging them with debris.

Bischoff, a former Victorian who now lives in Gold River, became so involved with caving that she gave up her job as a sales clerk to devote all her time to developing the resource.

She works closely with Paul Griffiths, president of the federation.

While attending the University of Victoria, Griffiths was largely responsible for developing the cave exploration movement in B.C.

Bischoff said for many years the Rocky Mountain Range was regarded as Canada's caving centre but not any more.

"The greatest concentration and variety of caves are to be found on Vancouver Island," she said.

"Some are exceedingly spectacular, like the Quatsino cave system near Gold River. It has an astounding variety of geological formations, ranging from an underground glacier to a long shaft called Deep Mother which plunges into a cave."

Budget Held 'But They're Still Going To Scream'

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Saanich council should be able to avoid any mill rate increase in 1979 but that doesn't mean there will be no shocks in the tax bill for many homeowners, Ald. David Paterson said today.

Paterson, chairman of the finance committee, warned that total tax bills could still jump — in some cases by as much as 30 per cent — because next year is the second stage of the three-year period for phasing in assessment increases.

The bulk of the impact will fall on owners of older properties who have enjoyed many years of reduced taxation through an artificial ceiling on assessment increases, he said.

"They're still going to scream like hell, I know they will, but I believe it's a fair an equitable situation," Paterson said.

"Their assessments are now being brought to the level where they would have been but for the artificial restraints and they are being asked to do no more than pay their fair share on a continuing basis."

The alderman said he was prepared to "go out on a limb" and predict another hold-the-line budget for 1979 because he was encouraged by the provisional budget due for presentation to Monday's inaugural council meeting.

The document indicates an increase of about $1.8 million or roughly 15 per cent in the general tax levy for municipal expenditures, but Paterson noted that amount is covered by an over-all increase in the assessment roll.

With a mill worth more next year than this, no increase in the mill rate will be needed to make up the difference.

Paterson said in previous years the provisional budget was "padded" by department heads because they knew their spending proposals would be chopped back by council in rigorous budget-pruning sessions.

But this year the provisional budget is likely to come closer to the final one than ever before.

"I think this year we have taken a major step forward and produced a tentative budget that is much more realistic."

He said the municipality is likely to have a surplus this year of about $260,000, an increase of $80,000 on the 1977 year-end surplus.

"To the average guy in the street that probably sounds like a lot of money but compared with a tax levy of nearly $12 million last year it's a very small amount," Paterson said.

One factor contributing to the surplus was larger-than-expected revenue from building and plumbing permits. Saanich budgeted $566,000 but has received $116,000 more.

'NOBODY OFFERING AIRBUS' — WHEATON

Mayor Talking 'Pie in Sky'

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria Chamber of Commerce vice-president Bob Wheaton today said Mayor Mike Young is talking pie in the sky when he favors an airbus service over helicopters for Victoria to Vancouver traffic.

"No one is offering an airbus service," Wheaton said. "If someone was, we would be supporting it.

"Unfortunately, the mayor is talking about a proposal that doesn't exist."

On the other hand, Wheaton said, Okanagan Helicopters has made a firm offer of a Victoria-Vancouver service but this has been rejected by the mayor in favor of a mythical airbus proposal.

The mayor is hoping AirWest will start an airbus service and phase out its harbor-to-harbor seaplane runs.

However, last month the Canadian Transport Commission rejected an application by AirWest to use land-based planes from Pat Bay to Vancouver International Airport.

In addition, AirWest stated it was not interested in having its harbor service phased out. It applied for the airbus run to supplement its seaplanes, which can only operate in daylight.

AirWest wanted to run buses to Pat Bay airport after dark only and not during daylight when its seaplanes were flying.

The AirWest application was rejected by the CTC last month on the grounds the Pat Bay-Vancouver airport route is already adequately served, and after interventions by both Air Canada and Pacfic Western Airlines against the AirWest proposal. The company feels little could be gained by reviving the airbus issue.

PWA, which operates an airbus between Edmonton and Calgary, has no plan to run one between Victoria and Vancouver.

These developments appear to support the chamber's stand there is no airbus proposal.

Wheaton today said he will ask the mayor to sit down with the chamber transportation committee and review the airbus and helicopter questions.

Wheaton said he will ask that Ald. Bob Wright be present because he is in charge of land use and this would be crucial to any in-depth discussion of transportation.

"We want to discuss real proposals with the city, not proposals that exist only in the mind of Mayor Young."

He said Okanagan Helicopters, one of the largest in the world, made a firm proposal to the city and was "shabbily treated" by being told the mayor favored an airbus service.

"Okanagan Helicopters has been researching this question for years and at the last minute they were turned down in favor of a proposal that doesn't exist. We are angry about this but we want to sit down with the mayor and sort this out for the benefit of Victoria.

Prize Boulder Repossessed

A large boulder bearing a petroglyph carving has been repossessed by the provincial government nearly two and a half years after it was removed from a log dump at Fulford Harbor on Salt Spring Island.

A spokesman for Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf confirmed today that the three-ton rock was reclaimed Wednesday from the property of island resident Gordon Cudmore by staff of the provincial archeologist's department.

"They obtained a writ from the attorney-general allowing them to go on the land," said Maury Gwynne.

He said the rock was taken to the Salt Spring public works yard where it will remain until a decision is made on a permanent display location.

One possibility is that it will be moved to a small park on the island, Gwynne said.

Cudmore himself refused today to speak to a Times reporter about the incident.

"Every time I speak to a newspaper they put a whole bunch of blarney in," he said.

Following the rock's removal in the summer of 1976 Robert Skelly (NDP-Alberni) raised the matter in the legislature, asking whether charges would be laid against Cudmore both for moving it without permission and allegedly damaging the sandstone boulder.

Cudmore claimed at the time he had a perfect right to take the rock. He said when he first found it the rock was below low-water mark with just the tip protruding from the mud.

He claimed Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy had given him permission to keep it.

Look Out, Light Jumpers

Victoria police will crack down on drivers who speed or run amber lights next week, Derek Wild, the city's senior assistant traffic engineer, said today.

Wild said the enforcement campaign, which is timed to run from Dec. 1 to 7 during Safe Driving Week, will be evaluated by his department to judge its effectiveness in reducing accidents.

Wild said a recent traffic department study showed that a steady increase in the number of accidents involving fatalities or injuries is due to two main factors — running lights and speeding.

Since 1975 accidents involving injury have increased about 30 per cent, from 757 to an estimated 950 this year to the end of December.

Wild said police will be focusing their attention on 20 city intersections which have been accident spots over the years.

SHORING UP the shoreline, city work crews begin a project designed to fight continued erosion along Dallas Road waterfront near the foot of Douglas. The sea has been lapping away at the foot of the cliffs, causing serious erosion problems. City engineers are fighting back by building buffer zone of large rocks.

Time Off for Negotiators Key Issue in CUPE Talks

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

The joint bargaining committee representing five Canadian Union of Public Employees locals was set today to begin negotiations with their Greater Victoria employers.

An afternoon meeting was set but was dependent on union negotiators getting leaves of absence from their jobs.

CUPE spokesmen explained that municipal employers have clamped down on granting such leaves to union negotiators and one condition for the meeting was that various managers would give union people approval to attend.

Warned CUPE spokesman Tom Smith: "If one local isn't represented, then I guess there won't be a meeting."

The Joint Negotiating Committee bargains for five CUPE locals representing city outside workers and Oak Bay, Saanich and Esquimalt employees as well as Greater Victoria school board inside and outside workers.

Normally there are about three representatives of each local on the JNC which bargains with the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association, representing employers.

The CUPE contracts expire Dec. 31.

The pre-negotiation climate began to heat up earlier this month when GVLRA manager Carl Anshelm accused the JNC locals of deliberately stalling and said he had applied to the Labor Relations Board to force the unions to the bargaining table.

The JNC said at that time it had not completed its contract package and Smith said today the locals still have not finished drafting their proposals.

Preliminary meetings have been held between the GVLRA and three other CUPE locals bargaining outside the JNC, who represent city inside workers, as well as Capital Region and library board employees.

The employers' initial offer is for a two-year contract with an 11-per-cent increase over the two years and no cost-of-living allowance.

Meanwhile, on another CUPE-related matter, Jim Walker, president of Local 50 which represents city outside workers, said the union's lawyer will ask the B.C. Supreme Court to enforce a unanimous arbitration award handed down in October ordering the city of Victoria to raise the pay of Thetis Lake lifeguards.

The lifeguards still have not received the retroactive pay coming to them as the city is checking the matter with the Anti-Inflation Board, he said.

Walker said the local sent a letter to the city on Tuesday giving Victoria a week to give the lifeguards their back wages.

He said the city appears to be stalling because the LRB has already ruled that the lifeguards are a new classification within Local 50 and therefore do not come under federal anti-inflation guidelines.

Nice Guys Really Can Win

By DEREK SIDENIUS

When it comes to coaching, nice guys finish first.

That's the view of Ron Smith and he should know.

Smith is a psychologist who deals exclusively in helping coaches and athletes perform better in sports.

His summary after nearly 10 years of research and study: kids enjoy playing sports more, are more content, hold thrmselves in higher esteem and regard teammates more favorably if they are coached by someone who rewards effort as much as performance.

By contrast coaches who are punitive end up winning fewer games, he says. Kids in such circmstances are less able to cope with stress — particularly the fear of failure — and thus won't perform as well.

Smith, who teaches at the University of Washington in Seattle, said in an interview here the accent on winning in youth sports should be downplayed.

"I don't think we should ever eliminate competitiveness but I'd like to see us get away from the notion of winning at any cost."

Winning is fine, but trying to win is more important.

He said one of the greatest lessons a child learns from sports is how to deal with failure.

But here the coach can cause more harm than good. Children with a low opinion of themselves may be devastated by a coach who is highly critical and punitive. The child may become overly anxious; the stress hinders his concentration; his performance will drop off and so will his interest.

To keep this from happening coaches have to be supportive, flexible, and positive in their approach, he said.

Smith sees a danger in applying professional models to youth sports.

"Kids sports aren't professional and shouldn't be," he said.

"The goals of the two are completely different."

In youth sports the emphasis should be on having fun, on giving kids a chance to acquire skills and build character such as unselfishness, a sense of sharing, and an ability to compete in a fair fashion.

Smith, who spoke at the annual convention of the B.C. Psychologists Association here, said kids look for different things in their coaches.

Those between the age of eight to nine judge their coach on how punitive he is. The 10 to 12-year age group looks to how encouraging the coach is. For the 13 to 15-year group, the emphasis is on how technically instructive the coach is.

Smith has developed a training program for coaches in the Seattle area.

The course involves a 2½-hour session on behavioral guidelines. Smith also monitors the coaches during two games and charts how they responded to the kids in different plays. The coach is then graded according to how negative or positive his response was.

The purpose is to make the coaches more aware of how they are functioning in their role.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 17-year-old was charged in provincial court Wednesday with forcible seizure and assault causing bodily harm in connection with an abduction Monday in Saanich.

Zelko Stubljar, 4417 Torrington, was remanded in custody until today for election of his trial method and possible bail application.

A second adult was to have been charged but Crown counsel Robert Mulligan confirmed outside the court that only one adult and one juvenile have been charged.

The charges arise from an incident in which a 17-year-old was allegedly beaten and dragged from his home at 1563 San Juan in the early afternoon.

A 22-year-old man was released on his undertaking to appear but was ordered to obey an 11 p.m. curfew until his case was completed.

Michael Reeve Hays, 3930 Aspen Place, was charged with breaking into Frank Hobbs elementary school, 3875 Haro, early Wednesday morning.

Hays was remanded to next Friday for election of trial method.

Fined for drinking-driving were: Ricky Donald Bain, 20, of 518 Warren, $375; Frank Allan Huether, 20, of 2988 Charlotte Drive, $325; Clarence Frederick Munro, 29, of 3327 Fulton, $325; William Wright, 31, of Royal Roads Military College, $325; and Ricky Lloyd Byrneil, 19, formerly of 2054 Newton but now living in Medicine Hat, $300.

Phoenix Bonus To Help Belfry

Assistance for the beleaguered Belfry Theatre is coming from the University of Victoria's Phoenix Theatre.

The student group will present an extra performance of its current production, Ten Lost Years, at the Phoenix on Sunday at 8 p.m.

It will be a benefit performance for The Belfry which will receive all proceeds from donations, this being the form of admission.

The Belfry, Victoria's only alternate professional theatre, was rejected by Canada Council in its bid for a grant and received a disappointing grant from the B.C. Cultural Fund.

Attempts toward self-help through a special gala benefit performance of its Piaf show were thwarted when a thief took $3,000 in cash and cheques.

Carl Hare, UVic director of theatre, announced the Phoenix benefit.

"The theatre department wholeheartedly supports its appeal and hopes that Victoria will respond and that this gesture will be repeated in other areas of the city," he said.

Ten Lost Years is based on Barry Broadfoot's book in which he relates stories told him by Canadians who experienced the Dirty Thirties.

The stage version which incorporates mime and song, was adapted by Toronto Workshop Productions. It is directed by Hare with musical direction by Chet Lambertson.

Museum Lectures

A free public lecture series called Behind Closed Doors is to start at the B.C. Provincial Museum.

The series — there will be a lecture every Tuesday morning at 10.30 a.m. — is designed to acquaint Victoria residents with the museum's activities.

New Rabbi Speaks Friday

Beth Emanuel Synagogue's new spiritual leader, Rabbi Harvey Markowitz, will speak on The Rov and the Rebbe at the 7 p.m. Friday Shabbat service, which will be followed by an Oneg Shabbat to welcome the Rabbi and his wife Susan.

The Shabbat service at 10 a.m. Saturday will be addressed on the topic What Is Success.

Saanich Sets Objectives For Next Year

Planning, potholes, parks (the industrial variety) and public relations — those will be some of the priorities for Saanich council in 1979.

Mayor Mel Couvelier held an informal noon-hour meeting Wednesday with his new council and said later there was general agreement on some of the main objectives for the coming year.

In particular, council members were unanimous in resolving that the municipality's community plan be completed next year.

It was also agreed there should be more emphasis on improving the level of service in public works, by more prompt attention to potholes and other routine problems.

As far as the thorny issue of industrial parks is concerned, Couvelier said the phrase used was that council should rationalize its industrial park policy in 1979.

"You ask me what that means and I have to tell you I don't know," he added.

Aldermen expressed interest in continuing to explore ways of improving the municipality's community relations, he said.

"Neighborhood meetings, the appointment of an ombudsman and so on make a good start but we must continue to keep the community involved and informed."

Couvelier said no specific suggestions were advanced for achieving such an improvement, other than the possibility of assigning a specific staff member to oversee such things as the way residents are received at the municipal hall and how correspondence is answered.

Amid concern about increasing vandalism in Saanich, council members agreed there were no instant solutions but that special efforts were needed to tackle the problem.

"Some felt it might be desirable to call a special meeting of all interested parties to kick the thing around," said the mayor.

Fine Option Plan Backed

Saanich municipality wants to co-operate in a pilot corrections program allowing offenders to work out their sentence through some form of community service, provided there are no union objections.

Council's environment committee recommended Wednesday night that the personnel officer discuss the proposal with the executive of Local 374 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, before any commitment is made.

Graham Ross-Smith, B.C.'s senior probation officer, explained that the fine options program starting in the new year is an outgrowth of the community service orders program which has been in operation for four years.

Under the latter, a judge may order a convicted person to perform some work in the community as a condition of probation. The individual program can run to a maximum of 200 hours and must be completed within six months.

The fine options program, Ross-Smith explained, will allow convicted persons who have been fined but are unable to pay to "work it off by community service."

At present about 20 per cent of B.C.'s prison inmate population are serving time for non-payment of fines, he said.

Ross-Smith suggested that in Saanich offenders could be employed at various recreational facilities, the firehalls, police station and at the Swan Lake-Christmas Hill nature centre.

Assistance Pursued

Saanich council's environment committee recommended Wednesday night that the municipality seek senior government funding for a study of flooding problems associated with Tod Creek.

Committee chairman Ald. John Mika said the entire cost of the study could be financed under the Agricultural Resources Develop-

WARNING ON SNEAKS

Victoria police today warned merchants to be on guard against a pair of smooth-talking sneak thieves.

A police spokesman said the two men have netted close to $500 in three thefts including $360 from Western Waterbed World, 1124 Blanshard, on Tuesday.

The spokesman said one of the two men distracts the clerk while the other rifles the till.

The two got away with about $80 from Victoria Super Service on Alpha and about $20 from a cash box in the office of Dr. George Russell, 1120 Yates.

The suspects are in their mid-20s, medium build, around six feet tall and with long hair.

Supermayor Plan Supported

The Capital Regional District could benefit by having a supermayor, elected at large, most members of the district's executive committee agreed Wednesday.

The committee was preparing a paper which, if endorsed by the regional board, will be presented Dec. 11 at a special meeting of the Union of B.C. Municipalities to discuss recommendations of the provincial government's Regional District Review Committee.

At first Sooke director Charles Perkins said having a supermayor would be "archaic" but Jim Campbell, board chairman, presented a persuasive argument and won him over. Eventually, only Saanich alderman Howard Sturrock opposed the idea.

Campbell said if the report's recommendations are implemented by the provincial government, all other regional directors would be elected to represent individual areas and there should be someone elected by, and answerable to, the entire region.

Campbell, who represents the Outer Gulf Islands, said: "As a chairman of the regional board I have a constituency of 17 directors, except for the Gulf Islands. There isn't any one who can rise above parochialism and still be true to his constituency.

"It is important that there is a constituency which is seen to be regional. There would be at least one person on the board who could say that he did not represent one particular area but the region as a whole. No one can do that now."

City slderman Murray Glazier saw the position would be attractive to political parties wanting to get their man on the regional board.

Campbell replied he had never thought the public to be gullible and, if the public did make a mistake, the public could fire the person concerned.

The directors also agreed that regional governments should be recognized as a level of government and that new municipalities should be incorporated in populated rural areas.

They also agreed with the review committee's recommendation that electoral areas have local commissions made up of the director of the regional board and four other members, elected for two-year terms. At the discretion of the board, however, directors felt certain electoral areas, such as Colwood and Langford, should be allowed to have a combined local authority.

They also endorsed a recommendation that responsibilities of regional districts, municipalities and the provincial government should be defined by legislation.

Although there were misgivings that centralized property tax billing might not work in the regional district, the directors agreed with the review committee's suggestion that Municipal Affairs and Housing Minister Hugh Curtis have a study done on the feasibility of centralized billing.

Backing the study, Campbell said: "There are quite a few places in the province where it would be very useful."

They also endorsed a recommendation that the government cover the costs of programs carried out by regional districts at the request of the government.

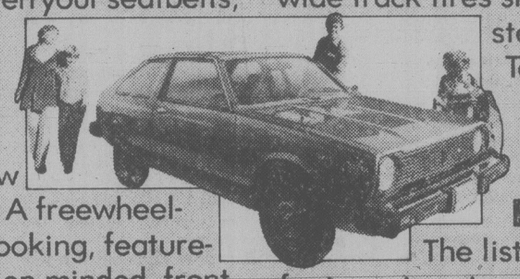
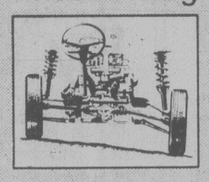
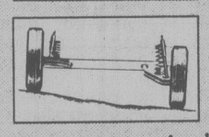
THE DATSUN 310 IS IN. VERY IN.

Whatever happened to driving for the fun of it? Has it gone the way of rumble seats and running boards? Has pleasure driving become a thing of the past?

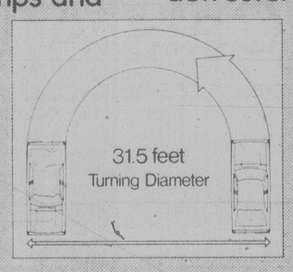
Well fasten your seatbelts, because Datsun is bringing it all back. With the new Datsun 310. A freewheeling, sporty-looking, feature-packed, action-minded, front wheel driving car. With plenty of comfort.







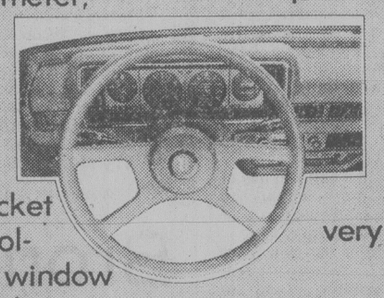
FREEWHEELING: With it's front wheel drive, the new Datsun 310 has excellent pulling power. Independent suspension for all 4 wheels smooths out the bumps and steadies the ride. The tight, 31.5 foot turning circle lets you manoeuvre and park where many other frontwheel drive cars can't.



SPORTY LOOKING: This is a very avant-garde looking automobile. Lots of tinted glass area. Sportscar instrumentation. Black wide track tires show off the steel wheels. Targa band on the GX Coupe.

6-YEAR ANTI-RUST PLAN COVERS ALL '79 DATSUNS

FEATURE-PACKED: The list of standard features is extensive and includes: steel radials, split fold down rear seat, full colour co-ordination, tachometer, quartz sweep-clock, column-mounted-controls, ashtray, lighter lights, cut-pile carpeting, reclining bucket seats, full cloth upholstery, rear and side window defrosters, rear window washerwiper and on and on.



ACTION-MINDED: The 1.4 litre engine is rally-proven and dependable. Power when you want it.

And, of course, economy. You can travel over 700 Kilometres* in the 310 on just one tank of gas. With the 6-year anti-corrosion policy that Datsun provides at no extra charge, 12,000 KM service intervals, and innovative engineering and design, it's plain that Datsun is far more concerned with the future of driving than the past. We would never look back without a very good reason. The fun of driving is a very good reason.

THERE'S MORE FUTURE IN A DATSUN.

Neale Barks For Overtime

Times News Services

CHICAGO — Vancouver has only two ties in this National Hockey League season. But Canucks' coach Harry Neale says that's two too many.

"After playing another tie tonight I am convinced more than ever that the NHL must adopt the overtime rule we had in the World Hockey Association," said Neale, who took over the Canucks after a stint behind the bench of New England Whalers of the World Hockey Association.

"It is not fair to the fans who pay their money to have to settle for a deadlock."

But 10,977 spectators saw Chicago Black Hawks and the Canucks skate to a 1-1 tie Wednesday, allowing Chicago to maintain its one-point edge over the second-place Canucks in the Smythe Division.

Ex-Black Hawk Randy Holt got his first goal of the season for the Canucks in the first period and Ivan Boldirev netted his 11th for the Hawks in the second period when Chicago held a two-man advantage.

Chicago defenceman Phil Russell, who was involved in an altercation in the second period, disagreed with Neale.

"Two years ago when we had 14 ties, the fans complained bitterly," he said. "The next year, we eliminated most of them and we dropped 20 points so, as far as I'm concerned, ties are necessary."

The game almost didn't end as a tie.

J. P. Bordeleau broke in on Vancouver goalie Glen Hanlon with less than three minutes left in the game, but the rookie stopped the shot.

"I had a great chance near the end of the game and I had a lot of open net to the left but I was in too close to shoot by the time I made up my mind," said Bordeleau. "I should have shot sooner and hoped for the best."

Chicago has been unable to defeat Vancouver in four tries this year — settling for two losses and a pair of ties.

Elsewhere, Atlanta Flames stood around and watched as New York Rangers knocked them out of sole posession of first place in the Patrick Division.

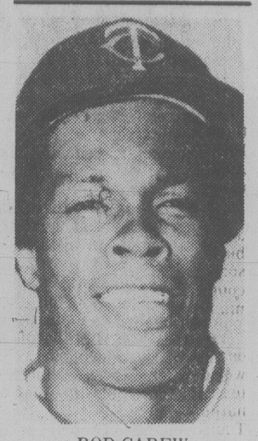
The Flames weren't idle in the true sense of the word, but they might just as well have been. A second-period defensive lapse of about four minutes and another of less than two minutes duration in the third afforded the Rangers all the opportunities they needed to score five goals and leave Atlanta with a 5-3 victory over the Flames.

The loss, combined with New York Islanders' 5-5 tie with Los Angeles Kings, left Atlanta tied with the Islanders for top spot with 32 points. And the Rangers are just two back in the league's most fierce division battle where even the last-place Philadelphia Flyers are only six points out of first.

In other games Wednesday, Toronto Maple Leafs beat Minnesota North Stars and Pittsburgh Penguins defeated Washington Capitals by identical 5-3 scores while Detroit Red Wings and Colorado Rockies battled to a 2-2 deadlock. (Summaries on page 22).

"We had some defensive lapses in the second period, but not just on the part of defencemen, the forwards as well," conceded Atlanta coach Fred Creighton. "It takes five guys to play defence, not just two (defencemen)."

The Rangers now have won seven in a row on the road to tie a club record.



ROD CAREW

Yanks To Get Carew?

ST.PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The talent-rich New York Yankees are trying to work out a trade that would bring them superstar Rod Carew of Minnesota Twins, says a report published Thursday.

The St. Paul Pioneer Press said the deal, which may be completed at next week's baseball winter meetings in Orlando, Fla., would send the Yankees' first baseman Chris Chambliss, centrefielder Juan Beniquez and pitcher Ken Clay to the Twins, plus $400,000 in cash.

Carew, a seven-times American League batting champion, now gets $300,000 and has an option season next year. He and Twins owner Cal Griffith have disagreed not only on salary but in club operations on several occasions.

The blunt-spoken Griffith criticized several Twins players in a far-reaching speech at Waseca, Minn., just as the 1978 season was ending. He thought the remarks were off-the-record, but a reporter was present.

Among other things, the Twins executive said Carew had been foolish not to demand more compensation, in view of his consistently great performance.

Carew has vowed he wouldn't play for the Twins again and wants to be traded, but as a veteran ballplayer he also has a say in where he goes.

The Twins first baseman and his agent rejected a Twins offer of $2 million for a new five-year contract and the two sides haven't negotiated seriously since the middle of last season.

Today's Horse Story: The Caliente Caper

Horse ringers are in the news again, and officials in the United States have proof that more than one horse has been substituted for another in many cases.

The latest disclosure may not be as big as the Lebon-Cinzano case at Belmont in New York, which received world-wide publicity, but still the switching of horses is obviously going on and the poor punter must be wondering just what he has been wagering on all these past years.

Harry Filion, publicity director at Exhibition Park in Vancouver, says there haven't been any "ringer" cases or even allegations of ringers for the past several years that he knows of, but he couldn't speak for the early days of the sport on the mainland.

The most famous ringer case in the Northwest, of course, occurred in the Longacres Mile, about the second year it was run. The horses involved were Exotude and Blue Boot. One was a ringer for the other — Filion wasn't sure which — but one thing was certain, the horse that won the race wasn't the horse it was supposed to be. And yes, the mutuel payoff was made before the ringer was discovered.

There was an allegation of a ringer at Sandown a few years ago when the crown alleged that a three-year old filly Music Melody was substituted for a filly named Last Note in the seventh race on the last day of a summer meeting. But the case was unproven in court and the trainer of the two horses was found not guilty of fraud.

But there's more than one way to skin a cat, and one of the classic capers of all time in horse racing — and this had nothing to do with a ringer — took place many years ago at the Caliente track, just across the Mexican border.

The story as recalled by Red Smith of the New York Times a few years ago, goes like this. .

Baron Long, a San Diego hotel operator — and apparently a legend in his time — with money, imagination and a talent for mischief, was the instigator and also the beneficiary of the plot. A professional gambler, Long owned a string of horses and controlled the Caliente track. He also had a friend who told him that his horse Linden Tree acted like a top horse, there was nothing south of the border that could warm him up, and he would be making his first start at Caliente in a two-furlong race for maidens on Jan. 7, 1932. It was the first race on the card. Enter the Baron.

Naturally, to accomplish his coup, Long had to build up the mutuel price to make the effort worthwhile and that took initiative and daring. The first race was ideal because the crowd was small, the play light and a few thousand dollars, correctly bet, could work wonders with the odds.

Others knew of Linden Tree, however, and the horse was certain to be a short-priced favorite. So Long got his trainer to enter two of his own horses in the race. Then he contacted a New York bookmaker, who also gambled on a heavy scale, and was an expert at laying bets off.

Long instructed the bookkeeper to wager $15,000 for him on Linden Tree and spread it around. The bookie warned him that when the race train arrived at the track from Los Angeles, the pros would bet Linden Tree down to 1-10. But Long was unperturbed. "Leave the details to me," he said. The bookmaker, sensing what Long had in mind, also warned that the books would start laying the bets off at the track once the price started going up on Linden Tree.

"It's my worry and my money," said Long.

On the day of the race when the race train from Los Angeles pulled out of San Diego, a woman shrieked: "Stop the train. Please stop. My husband is dying. Get a doctor quick."

Somebody yanked the emergency cord, the train stopped, a doctor made a quick examination, called an ambulance and said "don't touch or move the patient."

The ambulance arrived, the dying man was placed on a stretcher, put in the ambulance and driven . . . to Long's hotel. Whereupon the doctor greeted the man's wife with the question "did all go well after I left?"

"Just fine," said Maizie, the hotel chambermaid, while Jeb, a kitchen helper, suddenly had recovered from his heart attack and leaped up from the stretcher. Maizie and Jeb then went back to work and the doctor to his pharmacy.

Meanwhile, at the track, Long's entry opened at 20-1 and Linden Tree at 7-10. Long bet $10,000 on the entry and the price fell to 2-1. In those days, odds were computed manually and changes marked by hand on large display cards. Long had a chap named Giononni in charge of the department and told him to be in no hurry displaying the changes on Linden Tree. The next price showed the horse at 4-5. At that price the books around the country held their bets.

The race started, conveniently enough, just as the first trainload of fans arrived. The field was well bunched except for Linden Tree, who broke six lengths on top and won as he pleased. After the official result was posted so were the mutuels; and they showed $21.40 to win, $2.60 to place and $2.20 to show.

The books weren't worried because it seemed an error. But no correction came. Then they screamed, but had to pay off. The Baron had made a windfall.

Later an investigation was made and the stewards at first ruled the Baron off his own track. A week later, the ruling was rescinded with the statement that "we cannot punish a man for betting on his own horses."

Race Track Fire Linked to Ringers

CHICAGO (AP) — A multi-million dollar fire that destroyed the grandstand and clubhouse area at Hawthorne racetrack was set by arsonists and may be linked to a suspected "ringer" scheme, investigators said Thursday.

The fire on Nov. 19 caused an estimated $10- to $14-million damage.

Tyrone Fahner, director of the state department of law enforcement, said "some sort of liquid accelerant" was found on three wooden floors of the race track. He said tests are being run to determine if the liquid was gasoline or oil.

"They knew what they were doing," said Fahner. "They weren't using a cigarette or anything. It (the fire) was definitely planned."

Fahner said investigators are looking into the possibility that the fire was set in connection with a suspected horse substitution case.

In so-called "ringer" schemes, fast horses are entered in races under other names, using phoney papers, and then emerge as winners against great odds.

The Sun-Times said Thursday it has learned the FBI has been tracing the movements of two horses that won races at Hawthorne in what was believed to be a substitution scheme.

One of the horses won a race under the name of Charolius on the day before the fire. The horse actually was a superior horse called Roman Decade, investigators said they later determined. Charolius paid $10.80, $8.20 and $5.60 across the board.

Also being investigated by the Illinois Racing Board is what the Sun-Times says is the apparent use of the illegal pain-killer sublaimaze, a derivative of morphine, at Hawthorne, Sportsman's Park, Arlington Park and possibly other Chicago-area tracks.

Only recently have new tests been perfected to identify the presence of sublaimaze in a horse's system, the newspaper said.

The narcotic, which is injected into an animal, is reported to have been found in a dozen thoroughbreds and 10 harness horses that raced in the Chicago area.

Sublaimaze, like other narcotics, is not legal at any track in the United States. It works something like butazoladin, which is an analgesic that is permitted in some states, including Illinois. But unlike "bute" all the effects of sublaimaze are not known.

The Sun-Times quotes an unidentified veterinarian at Florida's Calder track as saying that sublaimaze "is 10 times as strong as heroin or morphine."

Easy Advance By U.S. Squad

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Teen-ager Tracy Austin and Chris Evert had little trouble Thursday as the top-seeded United States team cruised into the quarter-finals with an effortless win over New Zealand in the $130,000 Federation Cup tennis tournament.

Austin downed Brenda Perry, 6-1, 6-2, and Evert crushed Judy Chalenor, 6-1, 6-1. The victories gave the U.S. an insumountable 2-0 lead in the best-of-three-matches tourney and Evert combined with Billy Jean King in the doubles for an American sweep, beating Chaloner and Christine Newton, 6-1, 6-1.

A young West German, Sylvia Hanika, threw a scare into the Great Britain team when she whipped Britain's No. 2 player, Sue Barker, 6-3, 6-2.

Hanika, who turned 19 today, gave West Germany a 1-0 lead, but Great Britain recovered to advance to the quarter-finals when Virginia Wade thrashed Heidi Eisterlehner, 6-0, 6-3, and then combined with Barker to stop Hanika and Katja Ebbinghaus, 6-3, 6-0, in the crucial doubles.

In other matches, Australia defeated Japan 3-0, Czechoslovakia beat Indonesia 3-0, France upset eighth-seeded Argentina 3-0, the Soviet Union crushed Yugoslavia 3-0, Holland beat Chile 3-0 and Romania edged Switzerland 2-1.

In the consolation Plate competition, involving first-round losers, Marjorie Blackwood of Ottawa evened the set with Belgium at 1-1, defeating Michele Gurdal 8-6, then joined Lise Senn of Toronto for a 9-7 doubles win over Gurdal and Monique Van Haver.

Wendy Barlow of Victoria lost the opening singles match, 8-6, to Van Haver.

LETHBRIDGE — Victoria Cougars and Seattle Breakers, among others, appreciate New Westminster Bruins' road show.

Bruins' travelling experiences are keeping the team in a position relished by Western Division rivals in the Western Hockey League.

There was more "appreciation" Wednesday when Lethbridge Broncos hung a 5-1 defeat on the Bruins. It was the defending champions' ninth defeat in 10 road games and kept the Bruins four points behind second-place Victoria and one ahead of Seattle. Bruins also have won only one of their last six starts.

In the process of "marking time," Bruins used up another game-in-hand.

Jay Soleway, Dave Snopek, Duane Sutter, Lindy and Randy Ruff scored for the Broncos, who outshot Bruins 44-16. Dave Orleski scored the lone Westminster goal.

Both Seattle and Victoria players, meanwhile, have received an extra Christmas gift. Teams have agreed to postpone a Dec. 22 game in Seattle until Feb. 4 and the decision will give players an extended Christmas vacation.

Cougars will start their Christmas break Dec. 20 and will return Jan. 1 to prepare for a road trip starting Jan. 3 in Portland.

Vancouver Sailors Win Race

PATTAYA, Thailand (Reuter) — Brett Willetts and Jim Heinmiller of Vancouver won the fourth race of the world Fireball yachting championship Wednesday as the overall leaders, Laurie Smith and Andy Barker of England, finished second for the second successive day.

The Canadians led the 55-boat fleet almost all the way. Roger Tushingham and Nigel Vivian of Britain overhauled them briefly on the third-leg spinnaker reach but Willetts regained command on the following upwind beat. Tushingham and Vivian finished third.

South Africa Deleted From Test Calendar

LONDON (AP) — South Africa was officially eliminated from the test cricket calendar Thursday.

The Test and County Cricket Board, crickets ruling body, formally announced that South Africa will not tour England in 1980 as had been scheduled.

Peter Lush, the board's public relations officer, said: "South Africa was pencilled in for 1980 but it was never a confirmed tour. So there was no question of making an official cancellation."

Harper, Hextall Dropped

DETROIT (AP) — Two veteran Detroit Red Wings, captain Dennis Hextall and defenceman Terry Harper, have apparently donned their winged-wheel jerseys for the last time, Ted Lindsay, general manager of the National Hockey League club, said Wednesday.

Harper was shipped out to Kansas City, Detroit's Central Hockey League farm club, to learn about coaching and Hextall is on the trading block, Lindsay told members of a Red Wing booster group.

Neither player accompanied the team on this week's West Coast road trip.

At Kansas City, Harper will play and work with young players and prepare for coaching duties with the Red Wings, Lindsay said.

Playdowns Getting Early Start

Times Staff

The opening playoffs of the curling season start Friday at Esquimalt with the junior and juvenile men, on the one hand, and the Canadian Legion contingent, on the other, sharing the action.

Actually, the junior and juvenile playdowns originally were scheduled for next week but a confliction of dates with high school play forced the change.

For the juniors, particularly, the South Island playdown, with four to advance to the Island final in Campbell River, Jan 15-17, is a biggie.

Reason is that the national junior men's championship is scheduled for Victoria Club in March, and it would be nice to be playing for the national at home, wouldn't it?.

Six rinks had entered by Wednesday. Entries were to close last night. Skips are Rod Morrison, Racquet Club; John McGowan, Racquet Club; Kelly Horrigan, Victoria; Guy Herrington, Juan de Fuca; Ralph Kitchen, Racquet Club, and Barry Moore, Esquimalt.

In the juvenile division rinks were entered by Ralph Witzke, Juan de Fuca; Bruce Fraser, Racquet Club; Jeff Hooper, Esquimalt, and Garry Irvine, Esquimalt.

Times were to be set today.

The regular division of the Legion playdown has seven entries — Dick Austin, Esquimalt; Barnes, Walker, Spicer and Sangret (no other details available), and Jack Anderson, Colwood, and Gord Carmichael, Victoria.

Three rinks are entered in the seniors category. They are skipped by Alex More, Esquimalt; Gordon Hooey, Britannia, and R. O. Nicholson, Sidney.

One winner will come out of each division.

Otherwise, move over guys — Canada has been invited to participate in a Ladies' world competition in 1979. The championship is in good hands with The Royal Bank of Scotland sponsoring the event scheduled for Perth, March 17-23.

And why not; or, as described by Mrs. Dorothy D. New of Edmonton, Canadian rep on the International Curling Federation: "another step toward recognition of women's curling as a premier attraction in all countries where the game is played." Ten countries are expected to compete.

So sharpen up girls, the world is yours (as if it ever wasn't).

It's nice to see Glen Pierce move back into the Consols picture by winning the Totem in Vancouver last week. Here's a veteran who was always right there in his first heyday, but just couldn't get past that final hurdle. He has been there at least six times previously.

The other members of his rink are Wayne Matthewson, Bruce Davey and Fuji Miki, who described themselves as "three guys looking for a skip." Well, they found one, Pierce found a rink, and they'll be tough at Duncan, Feb. 2-4.

Playland's two rinks with a shot at the other Totem berth are made up of Barry Harvey, Ernie Hawkins, Cole Kirby and Rip Kirby, and Bart Longmore, Jim Dangerfield, Tony Ibaraki and Barry Brown.

Harvey won the Totem "C" event and Longmore was beaten by Pierce in the "A" final. And good luck to them in the playoff too.

ONCE BANNED, IT'S AGAIN 'SUITABLE'

Russia Newest Power in Rugby

max low

Say rugby and we usually think of the British Isles, of France, of New Zealand, Australia, South Africa and now, of course, of Canada.

But not many of us would associate the rough-and-tumble amateur sport with such serious-minded Communist countries as Russia and Romania.

Yet the Soviet Union is on its way to becoming a world rugby power. Its young team lost its first-ever international against France in Toulouse recently by 29 points to 7.

Though that's pretty decisive, the Soviet players left an excellent impression all round and did well considering they had arrived in Toulouse only two days before. And since that game the Russians have defeated Italy, 16-8, in another international.

The world may have failed to notice, but rugby has become the fastest-growing sport in the Soviet Union today. There are about 30,000 players in around 220 clubs fielding more than 1,200 teams with the 16 top teams playing in the elite Soviet Rugby League.

Rugby was introduced to pre-revolutionary Russia back in the 1880s, ahead of soccer. But (and this should interest Mother Hubbard and some of the guys down at the James Bay clubhouse!) Tsarist police got the sport banned as "likely to incite a riot."

Russia's communist rulers after 1917 kept on the ban, though the sport was not without its defenders. Anatoli Lunacharsky, Lenin's first minister of education and culture, thought rugby a "great game for strength and toughness as well as sense of fair play."

Rugby came back in the 1950s after Soviet students saw two Welsh teams playing it at the world youth festival in Moscow in 1954. The students had a go themselves, and soon the Soviet air force took the game under its wing and before long the Moscow Aviation Institute became a major rugby centre.

Now, the government has apparently decided that rugby is a suitable leisure activity for Soviet citizens after all. It may, says the government, even be useful as therapy to relieve frustration and aggression.

Consequently, the game is booming there. The Russian national side, already dubbed as the "All Reds" by the British press, has been impressing lately and many club teams from England, New Zealand, Italy, France and even America have made rugby tours of the Soviet Union.

So far, no Canadian sides have been to play in Russia. But what would it take to get the okay for such a visit by a good club team like, say, James Bay, and for a return tour to Canada to be made by a Russian squad?

Just a hell of a lot of negotiating by Canadian Rugby Union officials, says Victoria rugby historian Don Burgess.

"Certainly the sport is growing very rapidly in Russia," says Don. "They are very physical, very strong and use a lot of science in their play as they do in all sports."

Though we never read much of their exploits, rugby has been very strong, too, for some time now in Romania where the people are almost fanatical about it. At one time, in fact, Romania held the world record for a rugby crowd size after 125,000 fans packed a stadium to watch its country play an international match with France.

"The Romanians toured New Zealand the season before last and, though they didn't play the very toughest teams there, they won more than 50 per cent of their games," Don pointed out. "They didn't play the All Blacks but they did take on the Junior All Blacks and beat them."

So what about inviting a Russian or Romanian team or teams from both countries to come on a tour of Canada and, of course, Victoria?

Great idea, says Don, who is now a director for B.C. on the CRU board. If only we can be patient through all the negotiating and arranging.

You may recall last Thursday I told you a little about Scrum Down, the new national rugby paper put out in Vancouver? Well, in the latest issue just out the Scrum Down Personality this time is none other than James Bay captain Gary Johnston. And there are plenty more of those fine photos by cameraman Pat Carr.

What a guy!

Mid-Game Surge Heralds Leaf Win

Esquimalt Maple Leafs managed to pack eight goals into the second period Wednesday en route to a 15-9 victory over Western Homes Buckaroos in a South Island Big Six Hockey League game at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Randy Krantz set the apace for Leafs with five goals and three assists, Bill Jobson added three goals and three assists, double tallies came from Gerry Blanchette and Bob Martin while singles were contributed by Dale Cook, Bayden Robinson and Rob Coldwell.

Garth Cunningham and Bill Pettinger each scored twice for Bucks and Jerome Lidster, Jim Pickering, Dennis Sproule, Norm Allen and Lee Billinger fired singles.

Leafs led 3-1 after the first period and enjoyed an 11-3 advantage going into the final frame.

In another game, Juan de Fuca Merchants won their first game of the season, beating Duncan Silver Park Blades 4-3 at Juan de Fuca Arena.

Hollett Ignites Fire As Flyers Burn Braves

CHEMAINUS — Greg Hollett got things started Wednesday and Fuller Lake Flyers came up with a 4-2 upset over Saanich Braves in South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League action at Fuller Lake Arena.

Brian Branting and Len Meyers also scored for the Flyers, who moved to within nine points of the first-place Braves and enjoy two games in hand.

Wayne Larsen scored both goals for Braves, who trailed by period scores of 3-1 and 4-1.

Ken Stanton aided the Fuller Lake cause by blocking 43 shots on goal while Marty Wakelyn made 35 saves for Saanich.

No Holiday Break For Vikes, Vikettes

Christmas break? Bah humbug.

If you're playing for UVic Vikings and Vikettes, there's no long holiday just because there's a lull in the conference schedule. But before you cast coaches Ken and Kathy Shields in the roles of Mr. and Mrs. Ebenezer Scrooge, you might consider that it takes a heap of competition to keep a basketball team sharp.

Accordingly, Vikings meet University of Winnipeg Wesmen in an exhibition game Sunday night at 8:30 at McKinnon Gym, then play what could be their toughest foes of the season — Athletes in Action touring all-stars — next Tuesday night, also at McKinnon.

Vikettes, meanwhile, play in a tournament in Vancouver Friday and Saturday against UBC Thunderettes and a couple of senior "A" entries, Vancouver Critters and Calgary Macs. They're scheduled home Sunday in time to test University of Winnipeg Lady Wesmen, ranked second nationally, in a 6:45 p.m. encounter at McKinnon. Vikettes are unranked despite their record of 66 consecutive Canada West conference victories.

The Wesmen are rated favorites with Brandon Bobcats to take the Great Plains Athletic Conference championship this season. Vikings beat them 84-72 in Winnipeg earlier this month but it took what Shields described as his team's best game of the season to do it. Top Wesmen players include Belaineh Deguefe, a 6'9" centre, and Ken Opalko, a 6'4" forward, both members of the national junior team.

The Lady Wesmen, guided by former national women's coach Vic Pruden, have the same team back that finished second to Laurentian Vees last spring in the Canadian college championships. The lineup includes 6'6" centre Debbie Steele, 5'9" forward Dorie McPhail and 5'6" guard Gail Winston, all members of Canada's senior women's team.

Meanwhile, Jane Favalli of the Vikettes and Rene Dolcetti of the Vikings have opened up big leads in the CWUAA women's and men's scoring races.

Favali, who hails from Kamloops, where she was a B.C. High School All-Star and also a member of the junior and senior national teams, is averaging 22.5 points a game. The 18-year old, six-foot, two-inch freshmen has 135 points in six games and is described by Vikettes coach Kathy Shields as "probably the best freshman I've ever seen." Favali has 32-point bulge over Donna Hanna of Lethbridge. Luanne Hebb of the Vikettes is fifth with 91 points.

Dolcetti has 131 points in six games and a 21.8 average

CALGARY (CP) — Seven Canadian intercollegiate basketball teams, including St. Mary's University of Halifax and Wilfrid Laurier of Waterloo, Ont., will take part in the University of Calgary basketball tournament Jan. 4-6.

Other entrantsinclude Victoria Vikings, British Columbia Thunderbirds, Alberta Golden Bears, Manitoba Bisons and Whitworth College of Spokane.

Athletics Edge Trilec With Late Foul Shot

Ian Lewis scored on a late foul shot for what turned out to be the winning point as Victoria Athletics nipped Trilec Installations 67-66 in a Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League overtime battle Wednesday at Central Junior High School.

Lewis boosted Athletics into a 67-64 lead late in the game and Trilec could only manage a single basket in the dying seconds.

Ken Olynyk fired 16 points to lead Athletics, who are now 5-3. Bruce English was the top gun for Trilec, now 2-6, with 19.

STELLY'S GIRLS WIN

Controversy Worries Golfers

HANALEI, Hawaii (Reuter) — The 48 teams in the World Cup golf tournament — including the controversial South African entry — shot final practice rounds Wednesday, with the United States pair of Andy North and John Mahaffey looking more and more like the ones to beat.

North, the U.S. Open champion, and Mahaffey, the PGA titleholder, will be trying to make amends for last year's eighth-place finish, the U.S. team's lowest ever, when the tournament tees off today at the 6,940-yard, par-72 Princeville course on Kauai.

The Spanish team of Manuel Pinero and Antonio Garrido will be trying to give their country its third victory in a row.

Dan Halldorson of Brandon and Dave Barr of Kelowna make up the Canadian team.

Japan's chances have been hurt by the decision to play the World Cup in Hawaii instead of Ireland in July, as originally planned. The top 15 Japanese players are needed in a major event at home.

The switch to Hawaii was caused by the refusal of Ireland to admit golfers from South Africa because of that country's racial policies.

Local groups on Kauai, including the council, passed resolutions urging a similar ban, but the protests have been ignored.

The South African team of Bobby Verwey and Nicky Price—replacing Gary Player and John Bland who are competing in the South African PGA—have been given round-the-clock protection.

On Wednesday, the Supreme Council for Sport in Africa officially protested the South African participation.

Council secretary-general Jean-Claude Ganga, in issuing the protest from Yaounde, Cameroon, said African countries would take strong action—including a possible walkout at the 1980 Moscow Olympics—if South Africa is allowed to participate here.

"It's not that we're not listening, but we believe in adopting a different approach to the problem," said World Cup executive director John Ross.

"Some people believe in isolation as the solution, but we hope to achieve the same result through encouraging South Africa to take part in international competition."

Ross also noted that South Africa's second reserve for the two-man event is Reggie Mamashela, a black who has played several times in Britain.

SEATTLE SLEW LAUNCHES NEW CAREER ON THE FARM

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Seattle Slew, the $17,000 yearling who blazed his way to the 1977 Triple Crown and more than $1.1 million in career earnings, returned to Kentucky on Wednesday to begin his stud career at Brownell Combs II's Spendthrift Farm.

The dark brown colt, who won 11 of 14 career starts and overcame serious illness and injury this year, was flown here from New York's Belmont Park. Karen and Mickey Taylor and Dr. Jim Hill, Slew's co-owners during his thoroughbred racing career and now shareholders in his $12 million syndication, accompanied him. They, and about 20 others who followed Slew to Spendthrift Farm, sported yellow buttons reading Seattle Slew Day. Today has been proclaimed Seattle Slew Day in Kentucky by Gov. Julian Carroll.

Slew is the latest in a series of fabled thoroughbreds to stand at stud on Combs' farm. His paddock neighbors include Nashua, Wajima, Caro and Exclusive Native, sire of 1978 Triple Crown winner Affirmed.

Mrs. Taylor said she was "sad to see his career end because he's such a champion."

Slaton Signs Pact

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Pitcher Jim Slaton has agreed to a multi-year baseball contract with Milwaukee Brewers of the American League.

Sailor Disqualified

PATTAYA, Thailand (Reuter) — Australian Gordon Lucas won the third race of the world Fireball yachting championship Tuesday on the disqualification of Britain's Crispin Read-Wilson, who was first across the finish line.

Expos Deny Cash Woes

MONTREAL (CP) — A spokesman for Montreal Expos denied Wednesday rumors that the National League baseball club faces serious financial hardship, saying the team plans to spend money in 1979 to improve fan services at Olympic Stadium.

"We had a meeting last Thursday at which all aspects of the operation were discussed," said team publicist Richard Griffin.

"We're putting a lot of money into improving the stadium. If we had any sort of financial crisis, that's the last thing we would do."

Although declining to give the actual figure, Griffin said the Expos had a "seven-figure deficit" in 1978, largely because of economic conditions affecting all business.

"We're only in as much of a 'financial crisis' as any company in Canada or in Quebec," he said. "Ours isn't any worse than any other company's.

"We probably ended up this year with around the same deficit as the year before, and we could do the same next year."

The Expos, entering their 11th season in 1979, are believed to have lost between $1 million and $2 million this year.

"We're expanding our concessions for next season and looking at other improvements," the spokesman said.

LACK OF SNOW HITS SKIING

(Reuter) — World Cup ski organizers Wednesday called off the Criterium de la Premiere Neige, first event in the World Cup series, at Val d'Isere because of lack of snow.

The men's events, scheduled Dec. 6 to 10, will be shifted to Schladming, Austria, at a later date. The women's downhill and giant slalom will be held at Val d'Isere between Dec. 17 and 21.

Northern Ireland Tops European Cup Group

United Kingdom teams won two of three games Wednesday in European Cup soccer competition.

Northern Ireland moved to the top of the Group 1 standings by defeating Bulgaria 2-0 in Sofia on goals by Gerry Armstrong and Billy Caskey.

It was Northern Ireland's second victory in the five-country group, together with a draw. England, with a win and a draw, and Ireland, with three draws, are two points behind.

Bulgaria, with a loss and a draw, is in last place, a point behind Denmark, which has two losses and two draws.

Meanwhile at Wrexham, Wales scored its second consecutive victory in Group 7, defeating Turkey 1-0.

In the only other game played to date in the group, the Welsh defeated Malta 7-0. Their strongest opponents, West Germany, have not yet seen action.

And at Lisbon, Portugal beat Scotland 1-0 in a Group 2 game before 60,000 fans.

Portugal leads the group with five points, two more than Austria, while Scotland and Belgium have two points each and Norway one.

In a English Football Association Cup match at Weymouth, Aldershot of the English Football League's fourth division ended the giant-killing hopes of non-league Weymouth with a 2-0 victory in the replay of their first-round match.

The winners visit Barking, another non-league side, in the second round Dec. 16.

Let a Quasar Microwave help you cook great dishes. And we'll give you great dishes to cook with.

That's right! For a limited time, buy any one of Quasar's three great Microwave ovens and we'll give you a set of three beautiful Corningware dishes...at no extra cost.

And there are a lot of good reasons for buying a Quasar. First, any Quasar Microwave will cook as many different ways as a conventional oven—but in about one-fourth the time!

The best reasons though, are Quasar's many outstanding features. Features that offer all the cooking convenience you demand...no matter which Quasar you buy.

Important features, like a setting that defrosts frozen foods in a matter of minutes. A low setting for delicate dishes. Even a temperature Probe... choose the perfect temperature for any food, the probe does the rest.

And for great dishes with great ease, our MQ6600 features Insta-Matic Cook. A one-touch control that eliminates all the guesswork.

If you're out to do some great cooking, come in to your Quasar dealer. He'll help you pick a great oven...and we'll help you with the dishes.

Eased Rape Law Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament was told Wednesday that the offences of rape, attempted rape, indecent assault and gross indecency should be removed from the Criminal Code and replaced by new offences of "sexual aggression" and "sexual interference."

The Law Reform Commission of Canada, in a report tabled in the Commons by Justice Minister Marc Lalonde, also recommended that the "spousal immunity" clause, which prevents a wife from charging her husband with rape or similar offences, be repealed.

"No individual should be forced to submit to a sexual act to which he or she has not consented," the report says, setting out the principle underlying the proposed changes.

"In sexual relations, consent must be of the essence. Sexual activity must be consensual and not procured by force or trickery . . ."

Otto Lang, Lalonde's predecessor as justice minister, said recently the commission proposals will be taken into account in redrafting the sexual provisions of the Criminal Code this winter.

Any change in this area is controversial, however, and changes in the law may be unlikely until after the next federal election expected in 1979.

Rape, punishable by life in prison and associated offences would be replaced by two new provisions.

"Sexual interference" could be charged against anyone who, "for a sexual purpose, directly or indirectly touches another person without the consent of that person." This would be treated as a summary offence or a major one punishable by five years in prison.

"Sexual aggression" would involve the use or threat of force "for the purpose of sexual interference" and would be punishable by up to 10 years.

In recommending the repeal of the rape laws, the commission said the main characteristic of rape is its aggressive rather than its sexual aspect.

In a working paper on sexual offences last June, the commission proposed that a single offence of sexual assault replace rape, with the degree of force to be taken into account in sentencing.

The commission recommended that the offences of buggery, bestiality and gross indecency be repealed. Buggery and gross indecency would be covered by the proposed offences of sexual interference or aggression.

"Bestiality would still be covered by the various laws for the protection of animals . . ."

INCEST TABLED

OTTAWA (CP) — The Law Reform Commission of Canada stuck to its guns Wednesday, recommending to Parliament that "incest between consenting adults" no longer be a crime.

This would apply, if other proposals become law, to anyone above the age of 17. Those 17 and under would be protected by a law prohibiting sexual intercourse with dependents under 18.

There would be an absolute ban on sexual relations with anyone under 14.

The proposals were tabled in the Commons by Justice Minister Marc Lalonde and are contained in a volume proposing a broad reform of sexual offences in the Criminal Code.

The incest proposal may draw the most lightning. Conservatives last winter took aim at commission officials for even mentioning such changes as the Commons justice committee drafted a report on pornography.

The proposals initially were made last June in a working paper. Later, the commission got a petition signed by about 300 persons asking: "Please do not take incest out of the Criminal Code."

Ice Ship's Fuel Tank Damaged

CALGARY (CP) — A fuel tank on the icebreaker John A. Macdonald was damaged when it ran aground in the Beaufort Sea in mid-November, Dome Petroleum Ltd. said Wednesday.

Dome said the accident occurred when the vessel, leased from the coast guard for support work in off-shore exploration, was conducting ice investigations east of Tuktoyaktuk. There was no structural damage to the vessel.

Mr. Goldman You're A Wonderful Buyer!

Just returned from my Eastern Canada trip via C.P. Air having the most successful trip ever . . . my timing was right and came away with unbelievable values in name brand suits, imported sweaters, sport jackets and leathers from Canada and Israel, just to name a few . . . and the nice thing, the clothing purchased was from Canada's most respected makers . . . come in and say 'hello' — I'll recognize you . . . Murray

YES, GOLDMAN IS ON YOUR SIDE THIS CHRISTMAS

THIS WAS SOME TRIP THIS IS SOME... SALE

Thurs. Fri. Sat.

My trip got me close to 1000 pants (I'm not pulling your leg) and the saving is tremendous for you and for me . . . finest all wool flannel slacks, firm in fabric yet soft to the touch. Full top or side pockets, loops or extension waist band — you name the shade, we've got it! Honest to Goodness, $50 value, your price $33.

It gets better as we go along. Dressing gowns are a man's favourite gift and we have tons (not really) . . . from velours and cottons to terrys — a jam-packed rackful — everything goes at 25% off, (rack extra).

Turn off your TV, this is more fun. When it comes to sport jackets, we've got the best (if I don't say it, who will?). Magnificent tweeds of every description with interesting detailing, suede elbow patches and collar tabs. Hold on to your seat (anybody's), here comes the price — $88 (Goldman, you're all heart.)

Now we're going to sock it to you (you're not funny, Goldman). Wool Socks by McGregor in ankle, midcalf length and are you ready! Just 2 pair for $5.00 (well snap my garters!) Want them gift wrapped? We don't do it — just wanted to know.

I know you've been waiting with bated breath for my suit offer. This is not just an ordinary suit sale, these are quality and fashions suits from respected suit makers . . . we're talking about regular values of $225 to $275, even some at $295 . . . our sale price, just $166. and when you consider the tailoring the all wool fabrics and the 3 piece vested styles, this is a bargain, Sir! (We must charge for alterations).

Stick with me, we're rolling now. We've got raincoats so who cares if it rains. Can't mention the maker (you'll know it) — the quality and style is good at $75 but for you, $44 and that's even better. Even if you don't buy, keep reading, please.

Boy, has Goldman, the knitwit, got sweaters! Tons of them (not really). Name brands from Italy in vee, crew and turtle neck styles, $24.95 value at a generous $16.88 (I know I'm too generous).

. . . and a massive table, tons of them (not really) of name brand Shetland, velours and fine and bulky knits in pullovers and cardigans at a whopping 25% off (Berma, taking dictation, just fainted at the price!)

Good evening Mrs. Johnson. / M.G.

. . . and here's the happy ending — altogether now.

AWWWWWWWW! . . .

Every piece of leather and suede jacket and topcoat in the store, including sheepskin carcoats — and I mean everything, all at 25% off — that's Fall '78 leathers at 25% off . . . thanks for sticking with me.

Iron Plant Breeds Chronic Illness?

MONTREAL (CP) — A union-organized research study has found widespread cases of chronic bronchitis, lung disorders, heart problems and hearing loss among 1,100 workers at the Quebec Iron and Titanium Co. Ltd., in Tracy, Que.

The report, financed by a Quebec government grant, was made public Wednesday by officials of the 200,000-member Confederation of National Trade Unions as part of their campaign against provincial proposals for a comprehensive health and safety law.

CNTU vice-president Gisele Cartier told reporters that the Parti Quebecois white paper is a setback, rather than an improvement for worker safety, in part because it would require joint employer-employee supervision of health and safety conditions.

To dramatize their point, local union leaders at iron and titanium joined Cartier in unveiling the iron and titanium report, the end product of a 1977 study of 1,100 workers at the Tracy foundry. Quebec Iron and Titanium is a subidiary of New York-based Kennecott Copper.

The report is based on research by 10 doctors selected by the labor federation. They received completed questionnaires from 1,073 of 1,138 workers at the plant and gave examinations to 971 respondents.

The doctors concluded that 11.8 per cent had chronic bronchitis, 35.7 per cent had minor lung disorders which could be a forerunner of serious problems and 11.4 had significant breathing trouble.

In addition, they found 51 cases of angina, 31 cases with evidence of myocardial infarctions — both heart disorders — and 64 cases with circulation disorders among a work force with an average age of 35.

It found a high instance of skin and eye problems related to noise, heat and chemicals associated with production methods at the foundry, 60 miles northeast of Montreal. There were three workers with cataracts, all veterans of at least 24 years at the plant.

They estimate that at least 383 workers have significant hearing loss, and call that figure conservative. At least half have worked more than 20 years at the foundry and another 30 per cent have been there between 15 and 20 years.

In addition, the report found evidence of a dozen lesser problems, such as exhaustion, severe headaches, stomach disorders, skin and eye irritations, backaches and concluded that in most cases, they were a result of working at the plant. A total of 581 complained of having at least one of these disorders, some two or three.

The authors attack the company's safety record. A total of 669 workers have had an accident involving some kind of treatment since starting at the Tracy foundry, they noted. That included 159 in 1976.

Labor Dispute Benefits

MONTREAL (CP) — About 300 composing room employees involved in a labor dispute at the Montreal Star are going to get an unexpected Christmas present of more than $2,000 each, the Unemployment Insurance Commission decided Wednesday

The employees refused to cross picket lines set up by striking pressman more than five months ago, but the commisson has ruled they are eligible to receive full retroactive benefits. Each worker would net about $120 a week after taxes.

Three members of an appeals tribunal agreed Wednesday that the employees were eligible for benefits because they had not formally participated in a walkout.

They ruled in favor of the workers despite the fact the workers had voted to strike, were part of a joint council negotiating a contract with the pressmen, and had been receiving weekly payments from the International Typographers Union.

Arson Ruled Out In Olds Blaze

OLDS, Alta. (CP) — There was no evidence to suspect arson in a Nov. 1 fire which destroyed a skating arena, an exhibition building and several grain elevators, provincial fire commissioner William MacKay said Wednesday at the conclusion of a public inquiry.

He also said that an early-warning system, had one been installed in the arena where the fire started, might have prevented the disaster or at least reduced the damage. Damage was estimated at $2.5 million but no one was injured in the fire.

MacKay heard a total of 18 witnesses Tuesday and Wednesday and accepted the testimony of Sylvester Lautan, an inspector with the provincial fire-prevention branch, that there was no evidence to support a theory advanced by some residents that the fire was started by Halloween pranksters.

Lautan said his investigations showed that the fire started in or near the furnace room of the arena. Other witnesses said no one broke into the area on Halloween night, when about 30 bonfires set in gasoline-soaked straw bales were reported in various locations in this community 85 kilometres north of Calgary.

CANADA CONDEMNS CAMBODIA

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will condemn alleged Cambodian human rights violations at a United Nations commission meeting in December but has decided against further action in th UN Security Council, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said Wednesday.

Jamieson said in the Commons the government will make "most vigorous representations" on the Cambodian issue at the UN Human Rights Commission meeting in Geneva in December.

However, Canada had decided against raising the issue at the Security Council because the government felt "the initiative wouldn't have any chance of success."

They Aren't Deadly SINs For Servicemen: Danson

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Barney Danson says he sees no sin in the defence department requiring social insurance numbers on mail sent to servicemen.

"In fact, I would be happy to have my thumb print on it if it would help in identifying me," he said in the Commons Wednesday.

But Conservative MPs said outside the House they see dangers in widespread use of SIN numbers particularly if they are tied to information stored in computers.

The individual has little control over personal information in computers, they said.

Leonard Jones, Independent MP for Moncton, said last week that letters to servicemen in Canada are being returned "because the social insurance number is not included in the address."

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) asked Danson in the House Wednesday whether he agrees with the rule.

"It is required for overseas mail and for ships at sea because of the great difficulties experienced if there is not specific identification," the defence minister replied.

The SIN number replaced the old regimental number on mail.

Why replace the regimental number with SIN, asked Lambert.

"I have had no complaints from those in the service with reference to this," Danson said. "It seems like a logical application of the social insurance number. . . . It is for easy identification.

"I am a little astounded about all the fuss that is made about this. I have never had any objection to it myself."

Lambert said outside the Commons that widespread use of SIN numbers can be serious, particularly if information gets into computers.

"The tie-ups with regard to computer-operated information are limitless. You have no control over it."

BROWN
. . . commission target

Police Boss Fights Firing

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Syd Brown, Waterloo regional police chief, said Wednesday he does not intend to resign and will go to court to protect his job if the region's police commission tries to fire him.

Talking to reporters, Brown lashed out at the Ontario police commission, which recommended Wednesday that he be dismissed.

A commission report on police brutality recommended Brown be fired because the force cannot properly operate under Brown's philosophy.

"As soon as I heard of the OPC inquiry, I said publicly they were doing a number on me and that was the whole point of the exercise," he said. "They've done precisely that."

"I think they have an old axe to grind."

Steve Harper, chairman of the Waterloo police commission, said certain sections of the report amounted to character assassination of Brown.

"What can I say?," Harper said. "I thought he (Brown) was a good man when we hired him and I still think he's a good man."

The chief, who is off duty until Dec. 11 because of illness, said he plans to return to work unless the Waterloo commission fires him.

Brown said the Ontario commission resented the fact he was hired as police chief. He had been a constable with the Metropolitan Toronto police force and president of the policemen's association.

"I haven't done anything wrong, why should I resign?" he said.

"I've never seen a report so one-sided," he said. "They (the commission) took as gospel everything said by the complainants and rejected all the text of the policemen."

Brown said he never lost the respect of rank-and-file policemen or the public and saw no problem with his continuing as chief.

He noted that during a phone-in survey on a local radio show Wednesday, 193 callers supported him, compared with 29 who said he should be fired.

"If I wanted to I could be elected chairman of the region," he joked.

The chief said a suggestion that the Waterloo commission require him to attend a management course if it decides to retain him as chief was the most insulting part of the report.

UNION WANTS NOOSE BACK

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — The leader of the union representing federal prison employees says the deaths Sunday of two employees at Collins Bay penitentiary prove that the death penalty should be reinstated.

Paul Caouette, president of the Union of Solicitor-General's Employees, which represents 8,000 prison employees and 4,000 police clerical workers across Canada, said the union has joined with the Canadian Police Association to push for the death penalty for persons convicted of murder.

"We are asking all federal candidates in the next elections to state publicly their stand on capital punishment," Caouette said Wednesday while in Kingston from Ottawa for the funerals of the two dead men.

Francis Eustace, 56-year-old guard at the penitentiary, and Paul Maurice, 40, a prison cook, were killed Sunday by a man wielding a knife in the penitentiary kitchen.

A second cook, Frank Davall, 56, was injured in the same incident. He was released from hospital Tuesday after being treated for stab wounds in his back.

Hugh Daniel MacDonald, 36, a prisoner at Collins Bay, was charged Monday with two counts of first-degree murder and one count of attempted murder.

Caouette said guards at the penitentiary should have been commended by senior staff for their handling of prisoners after the incident.

Guard dogs were brought in to help, he said, but guards stayed calm and prevented the volatile situation from erupting.

He said the incident Sunday could have been avoided if armed guards had been stationed in a caged-off area in the kitchen.

Flying Radar Fleet To Spy on Enemy?

OTTAWA (CP) — A plan to cover Europe and the North Atlantic with flying radar stations may take off at a NATO meeting next week, says Defence Minister Barney Danson.

Danson said in an interview Wednesday he is "confidently hopeful" the NATO defence ministers will approve a $2.5 billion plan to buy 16 to 18 of the cigar-shaped aircraft for watching enemy moves.

Canada would probably pay about $200 million or slightly less than 10 per cent of the total cost, the minister said. But Ottawa expected to get it all back in defence business for Canadian industry.

The airborne warning and control system (AWACS) will be the major item at the NATO defence ministers meeting in Brussels.

Danson said agreement depends on the industrial benefits each NATO nation will get. "That has been pretty well worked out."

The program calls for 16 to 18 Boeing E-3As, shouldering 30 foot radar dishes, to join 11 British Nimrod aircraft in patrolling European skies watching for a surprise enemy attack.

The AWACS aircraft are able, among other things, to detect enemy aircraft flying at tree-top level.

Ground radar stations can't spot fast, low-flying aircraft until they are almost overhead. AWACS aircraft can pick them up more than 250 miles away.

If war explodes, the AWACS aircraft can be transformed into moving command posts, hard to shoot down.

The United States is building Boeing E-3As for its forces. The E-3A, a modification of the Boeing 707 airliner, may be assigned to the North American Air Defence Command (NORAD), a joint Canada-U.S. operation.

If NORAD gets the planes, some may be stationed in North Bay, Ont., and a new regional headquarters in Edmonton. That depends on Canada-U.S. discussions.

Government officials say if NORAD and NATO both have these flying radar platforms they could circle the globe.

NATO members worked out a cost formula last year but the whole program was threatened when the British decided to pull out and proceed with the British-built Nimrod.

Robbery Unforeseen, Jeweller Out $31,512

MONTREAL (CP) — Jeweller Jack Cohen, who lost $31,512 in jewels when a small hotel safe was carried away in a holdup, cannot claim the amount from the hotel because the robbery was unforeseen, Superior Court Justice Gerald Deslandes has ruled.

Cohen rented display space from the Seaway Hotel here and had his jewels stored in the hotel's safe when the holdup occurred in June, 1974.

CABINET PAPERS COULD SHED LIGHT ON RCMP WRONGDOING

Six Weeks of Probing and Still No Documents

OTTAWA (CP) — In its sixth week of questioning high officials, a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing still hasn't gained access to cabinet documents that may shed light on why the RCMP security service broke laws in efforts to counter terrorism in Quebec in the early 1970s.

Prime Minister Trudeau assigned Cabinet Secretary Michael Pitfield in October to make relevant documents available to the royal commission but Pitfield's assistant, T.D. Finn, says procedural problems have held up the process.

"It's not something that's entirely resolved at the moment," Finn, assistant cabinet secretary for security and intelligence, said in a recent interview. He was referring to minutes of the cabinet committee on security and intelligence, which instructs the RCMP security service.

The commission itself refuses to comment at all on the matter.

Finn said the hold-up is a "constitutional convention" which requires the assent of ministers before Trudeau himself may release cabinet documents or cabinet committee minutes.

Documents below that level — those coming into cabinet committees and going out in the form of instructions to departments — may be released by Pitfield himself.

The commission has gained access to many of these in the last year while searching through RCMP files or those of other government departments.

But Finn indicated "procedural niggles" currently have blocked this source as Pitfield tries to co-ordinate the flow of such documents to the commission from a variety of departments.

This was being worked out with the commission, he said.

Trudeau said in October the commission wouldn't be allowed to poke into government files looking for evidence of wrongdoing. But he said the commission would be given any document it asked for.

Later in the month, government lawyers refused to allow the three royal commissioners even to see four government documents that had come from RCMP files.

The commissioners were only allowed to see them after the lawyers cleared the documents with the government.

They were produced by RCMP Lawyer Pierre Lamontagne, who indicated they would support retired RCMP commissioner W.L. Higgitt's contention that the government knew the security service had to break laws to do its job.

The commission has had no direct access to government documents but it has stumbled across references to them repeatedly in the last year as it worked its way through RCMP files, to which it has full access.

Finn set out six ways in which the commission has gained access to some government documents:

—An RCMP file or departmental file will refer to "cabinet document No. 1111 of 1975." The commission will ask Finn for the cabinet document, if it isn't already in the RCMP file, and it will be turned over with Pitfield's assent.

—Witnesses before the commission will refer to a discussion that may have taken place before a cabinet committee. A search will be made by Finn's office for related documents and these will be turned over to the commission.

—Commission researchers will ask whether Finn can produce information on a subject. The files will be searched and the information turned over to the commission.

—On its own initiative, Finn's office has given the commission "everything we've got on the mandate of the security service from its establishment" to date.

—The royal commisson will be told by a member of the public that it should look into a certain subject related to a government policy. Files will be asked for and produced.

—Government lawyers will sometimes ask for any material on a subject that hasn't already been sent the commission. Finn will turn such material over to the lawyers and tell them to make sure the commission gets a copy too.

Government lawyers argued Oct. 5 that the commission itself can't decide whether any of these documents may be made public. Only Solicitor-General Jean Jacques Blais could make this decision and as 95 per cent of government documents would deal with national security, they would have to be dealt with in secret.

Unions Rap UIC Curbs

OTTAWA (CP) — An organization representing building and construction unions says its 400,000 members should be exempt from proposed tougher unemployment insurance rules.

In a submission to MPs on the Commons manpower committee today, the Buildings and Construction Trades Department AFL-CIO criticized legislation that would toughen eligibility requirements, reduce all benefits and tax some benefits.

The reason: "At present, because of the state of the economy, there is an alarming proportion of people who rely on construction work, who are far below their nromal income and are desperate for employment."

The labor group specifically asked that its members be exempt from a proposal requiring up to six extra weeks of work from persons seeking benefits for the second time in a year.

The government has decided not to impose that penalty in regions where the unemployment rate exceeds 11.5 per cent. The construction industry should also be exempt because its unemployment rates are mode than 20 per cent, the labor group said.

Warning that the new rule will discourage workers from taking short-term jobs after they've started collecting benefits, the group recommended that incentives for temporary work be built into the insurance program.

It recommended that when a person takes a short-term job, his first entitlement to benefits should be frozen during that work period. When the job ends, his benefits should be increased and reentry into the program made easier.

The group also objected to a proposed reduction of benefits on grounds it "would only serve to increase the percentage of Canadians living in poverty or welfare and reduce distribution of purchasing power."

It also opposed plans to tax 30 per cent of benefits from beneficiaries with annual incomes higher than $21,500 on grounds this is "a discriminatory form of taxation and would liken the unemployment insurance system to welfare with a means test."

The union group said a government study shows about 13,500 construction workers will be prevented from re-establishing a benefit claim because of the measures. And because of persistent unemployment that number may double.

Under the new rules a person, after taking a short-term job, could re-establish only his first claim to benefits based on the number of weeks he initially worked.

But the extended benefits he would have received, particularly in a region of high unemployment, would be reduced one week for every week his short-term job lasted.

"This provides a disincentive to accept short-term employment," the union group said.

"Virtually all unemployed people would like a long-term employment opportunity, but in construction, most job opportunities are short-term."

It said the impact of the measure is "frightening and the economic situation of the individuals would be depressing even to the most callous proponents of change."

The legislation has been approved in principle in the Commons and now is being debated by MPs in the manpower committee.

PM to Quit In January?

TORONTO (CP) — CBC's As It Happens quotes Vancouver Sun columnist Marjorie Nichols as saying Prime Minister Trudeau may step down as leader of the Liberal party by mid-January.

Miss Nichols said on the program Wednesday that Trudeau has scheduled meetings with his most trusted political allies and friends, including Gerard Pelletier, Canada's ambassador to France, to seek their advice on his political future.

Trudeau now is going through what may be the most important period of his political life, Miss Nichols said.

She said Trudeau met with Quebec Senator Jean Marchand last week but "the critical person in all this is Gerard Pelletier," who she said will arrive in Ottawa next week.

Miss Nichols said Trudeau has only two or three trusted friends and "there's no question that the top of that list, No. 1, would be Gerard Pelletier."

She said Trudeau is calling in these people rather than going to the party membership for advice because "he is a man who would resist all party pressure . . . I think he's down to the final strokes where it's an intimate and personal decision of his."

She said if Trudeau decides to step down he would make an address to the nation by the second week in January and the caucus would elect an interim prime minister, probably external affairs minister Don Jamieson or Allan MacEachen, the deputy prime minister.

Clark Jaunt To Help Set Economic Policies

OTTAWA (UPI) — Conservative leader Joe Clark he will visit Japan, India, Israel and Jordan early in the New Year on a fact-finding tour to help develop Tory economic policy.

"The major focus of these meetings will be on economic planning and development, including, specifically, research and development and small business support policies," Clark said in a statement.

He will begin his two-week international tour with a three-day visit to Japan beginning Jan. 7.

Clark travels to New Delhi Jan. 10 for a two-day stay and then will be in Israel for three days beginning Jan. 14 for talks with Israel government officials.

On Jan. 17, Clark travels to Amman for a one day meeting with Jordanian government leaders to discuss "current and potential Middle East development projects."

'Really Two Million People Out of Work'

TORONTO (CP) — The program director of the Metropolitan Toronto Social Planning Council says the number of unemployed Canadians is two million, double what the federal government estimates.

Leon Muszynski said Wednesday that government surveys deliberately exclude a wide range of employable people "to define away the problem of unemployment."

"Such mechanisms as retirement, institutionalization, schooling, assumed unemployability by virtue of health, age, sex or family responsibilities are conveniently used to channel surplus populations out of the job market."

Muszynski was among speakers at a seminar dealing with social problems caused by unemployment and with ways to achieve full employment in Canada.

He said employment figures include anyone who works even one hour in a week, even if that person wants full-time employment, plus persons who expect to be working in the near future.

Unemployment figures exclude persons who have stopped looking for work because they believe no work is available or because of such personal reasons as illness or a return to school, he said.

. . . Six Jobs Vacant For Every 1,000 Filled

OTTAWA (CP) — Average daily number of vacant jobs in the three-month period ending Oct. 31 was 52,300, up 11 per cent from the previous period, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

A year earlier, the number of vacancies stood at 50,500.

For every 1,000 existing jobs during the latest period surveyed by the federal agency, six were vacant. That is an increase from five in the preceding three months. But the same as the comparable period of 1977.

In October, there were officially 798,000 unemployed.

The highest vacancy rate was in Alberta, with 12 open jobs for every 1,000 existing positions, while the lowest vacancy rate was in Newfoundland, at three.

The figures are said by Statistics Canada to provide a reliable indicator of trends in job openings.

Fighter Firm Denies Bow-Out Rumors

OTTAWA (CP) — McDonnell Douglas Corp. is considering withdrawing from the $2.3 billion fighter plane competition, leaving only General Dynamics in the field, says a source close to the competition.

But a McDonnell Douglas spokesman said today the company is staying in the race. He said the story may stem from some recent speculative news reports that the McDonnell Douglas F-18A is on the final list only to help the government get more out of General Dynamics.

An aide to Defence Minister Barney Danson said the government has not been told of any McDonnell Douglas plan to withdraw.

An informant, who refused to be identified, said today McDonnell Douglas is worried the government is only concerned about aircraft numbers.

The company is waiting to see what the government's detailed ground rules are for the final stage of the competition before deciding what to do, he said.

The McDonnell Douglas F-18A and the General Dynamics F-16 are the only fighters remaining in the competition after the cabinet dropped four other contenders last week.

Defence Minister Barney Danson has stressed the importance of meeting the government's target of at least 130 aircraft for the $2.3 billion price.

He said last week General Dynamics exceeded the target but McDonnell Douglas fell a bit short. He said McDonnell Douglas might increase the numbers during final negotiations.

SERVANT GETS HEARING

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal public servant who had claimed he was denied job advancement because he became involved in politics is to receive another hearing before the public service staff relations board.

The new hearing was ordered today by the Federal Court of Appeal, which said a board adjudicator should consider damages for Sant Singh, a health and welfare department research economist.

Singh ran unsuccessfully as a Progressive Conservative candidate in the 1974 federal election. Later, he claimed he was denied promotion and salary increases because of his political involvement.

In February, 1977, he filed a grievance with the staff relations board. An adjudicator, J.D. O'Shea, ruled that he had been wronged and ordered that his salary be increased.

That decision was appealed to the Federal Court which ruled in January of this year that the adjudicator had the power to grant Singh some relief but could not order the department to increase his salary or to promote him.

Suicide Solution?

MOOSE JAW (CP) — The suicide of a young woman in a city police cell has brought recommendations for increased supervision of prisoners and development of suicide-proofs cells.

A jury sitting at the inquest into the hanging death of Constance Louise Washo, 22, of no fixed address, made the recommendations Wednesday after a four-hour hearing.

Washo was arrested on the evening of Sept. 14 for allegedly stealing three bottles of liquor from a liquor outlet. She was placed in a cell and found at about 1 a.m. Sept. 15 hanging by a rope fashioned from a torn blanked tied to a protruding ceiling air vent. A medical examination revealed Washo died of asphyxiation.

It was not known how long she had been dead before her body was discovered. A matron on duty at the time testified that she checked the cell every 15 to 20 minutes but left the station for an hour to accompany an ill female prisoner to the hospital.

Hurry Scurry Shrimp Curry

Rice stretches costly crab meat into a gourmet dish

One of the biggest joys of eating out or at a friend's home is ordering or being served foods that you wouldn't always think to serve at home. Well, get adventurous and try some new combinations in your own kitchen. Here are two recipes for seafood and fruit to get you started.

In Crabacado Rice Skillet, the interesting combination is crab meat and avocado. In fact, the luscious avocado on top just invites you to dig in. The fruit in Hurry-Scurry Shrimp Curry is apple. It takes up the color of the sauce and the sweet and slightly tart flavor adds a special accent.

When serving widely divergent flavors in the same dish, it is important that there be a mild and bland-tasting food to tie everything together. Here rice fills that bill. It makes the meal complete from both a flavor and a nutrition point of view.

Crabacado Rice Skillet

- 1 cup each chopped onions and celery
- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
- 3 cups cooked rice
- 6 to 8 oz. crab meat, drained and cartilage removed
- ½ cup chopped sweet pickles
- ¼ cup chopped pimientos
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- ½ cup each mayonnaise and sour cream
- 1 cup grated Cheddar cheese
- 1 ripe avocado, peeled and sliced

Saute onions and celery in butter until tender crisp. Stir in rice, crab meat, sweet pickles, pimientos, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, seasonings, mayonnaise and sour cream. Heat thoroughly. Sprinkle with cheese. Dip avocado slices in remaining lemon juice. Arrange avocado in a spoke fashion over cheese. Cover and heat until cheese melts. Makes 6 servings.

Hurry-Scurry Shrimp Curry

- ½ cup chopped onions
- ½ cup sliced celery
- 1 large apple, peeled, cored and chopped
- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
- 1 can (10-¾ oz.) condensed cream of shrimp soup
- 1 cup sour cream
- 1 teaspoon curry powder
- 1 package (8 oz.) frozen cooked, peeled, deveined shrimp
- 3 cups hot cooked rice

Saute onions, celery and apple in butter until crisp. Stir in remaining ingredients except rice. Heat thoroughly. Serve over beds of fluffy rice with the following condiments: coconut, salted cashews, raisins and chutney. Makes 6 servings.

Heredity Ruled Out for Fat

By JANE E. BRODY
New York Times

For the average person, heredity is far less important than environment in determining his tendency to be overweight, according to the findings of a large study by Milwaukee scientists.

The researchers say their findings remove a common excuse among obese people for not losing weight and replace it with the realistic hope that weight loss is within their control.

Their conclusions were based on a study of 254 families with adopted children and 10,337 families with natural children. The families were gathered from among 73,532 women who belonged to a weight-reduction group called TOPS (Take Off Pounds Sensibly).

The researchers examined the tendency to overweight among the adopted brothers and sisters and among the natural siblings, and found very little difference between the two. In other words, if a child's adopted brother or sister was fat, he was nearly as likely to be fat himself as if the sibling was a blood relative. This shows that having a similar environment is more important than inheritance in determining degrees of overweight.

All told; the study indicated that genetic factors accounted for 12 percent of the variation in obesity and that environment was responsible for at least 32 percent. This finding is counter to those of previous smaller studies which suggested that children inherit their parents' tendencies to overweight and that environment plays a relatively small role. However, most if not all these studies looked at the relationship between parents and children in their tendency to obesity, a less reliable measurement than comparing siblings to one another, the Milwaukee researchers maintain.

"We all know people who can eat all they want and not gain and others who seem to get fat just from breathing," remarked Dr. Arthur Hartz, a preventive medicine specialist at The medical College of Wisconsin in Milwaukee. "For such people, heredity clearly is all-important. But such people are the exception. For the average person, the actual level of obesity is determined more by things under their control than by their heredity."

In addition to Dr. Hartz the research project was conducted by Dr. Alfred Rimm and Eldred Geifer, a mathematician at the college.

Baby's Bottle Can Rot the Teeth

Food for Thought

By Dr. Jean Mayer and Dr. Johanna Dwyer

Good teeth are important to good nutrition — not to mention the pleasure of eating. As you may know from sad experience, the pleasure of a crisp apple or piece of lean steak quickly disappears if each bit triggers a sharp twinge in a molar or causes dentures to slip.

Good nutrition is particularly important to children. Childhood is the time to experience all the wonderful textures and flavors of a varied diet. But it may come as a shock to many parents to learn that many infants and preschool children—already have extensive and painful dental decay which can limit their ability to chew and enjoy many foods. How is it that children so young can experience dental problems usually associated with older persons? In most cases this early dental decay can be traced to what is known as the "nursing bottle syndrome."

The syndrome is not new. In the 1800's, Dr. Jacobi, one of the first pediatricians in the U.S., remarked on the peculiar type of dental decay associated with baby bottles. In the last 25 years, a number of reports from many countries have described the same phenomenon.

The four upper front teeth usually are affected, while the lower front teeth — which emerge at about the same time — escape without cavities. The decay begins as an almost unnoticeable dull white band along the gum line — a sign that the calcium is beginning to break down. These whitish spots gradually darken as the decay progresses. In advanced cases, there may be nothing left except four brown stumps. By this time, the neighboring canine teeth and molars, which emerge later, also may be beginning to decay. The lower teeth usually are in good shape.

This characteristic pattern makes it simple for a dentist to pinpoint the cause of the problem — the child has been allowed to suck a bottle or sweetened pacifier at will, often long after the usual weaning period. The same pattern of tooth decay has been reported in children who have been breast-fed for two or three years.

Here's what happens. As the baby suckles, the liquid floats around the upper teeth. To visualize this, imagine sucking liquid through a straw. The straw is held at the top of the mouth, supported by the tongue, and the liquid is drawn in near the upper teeth. If the baby alternately dozes and sucks a bottle, there is a small pool of milk, or whatever liquid is in the bottle, surrounding the front teeth. If the liquid contains sugar, such as the lactose in milk, the fructose in fruit juice, or the sugar, honey or sweet syrups mothers often add to formulas, tooth decay is all too often the result.

Obviously, a young baby must feed from a bottle or breast during the early months of life. Milk formulas are good foods, mother's milk is nature's ideal food for infants. Although milk does contain the sugar lactose, under usual eating conditions it is swallowed quickly and has little contact with the teeth. Dental problems occur when the youngster is allowed to suck for long periods of time on a bottle or a sweetened pacifier.

Many mothers send their toddlers off to bed with a bottle, which may be suckled off and on throughout the night. Others will give a baby honey water or some other sweet mixture at bedtime or in place of a pacifier during the day. Then there are sweet-ened pacifiers that are, happily, less common in the U.S. than in Europe. In Germany and England, in particular, mothers often dip a pacifier in honey — a trick that may keep baby quiet, but one that plays havoc with the teeth and dietary conditioning.

A baby's teeth can be protected from unnecessary early decay by making sure that milk and other foods do not stay in long contact with the teeth. If you baby likes to fall asleep sucking a bottle, fill it with unsweetened water. And once a baby falls asleep drinking a bottle of milk, remove it and resume the feeding when he or she is awake.

Substitute In Honey

One cup of honey will replace one cup of sugar as long as the liquid is cut by one-quarter cup (e.g. if the recipe calls for one cup of water with 1 cup sugar, use only ¾ cup water with 1 cup honey). It's also suggested that when the switch is made to honey, you decrease the oven temperature slightly as baked goods brown a little faster.

CHICKEN: ROAST FIT FOR KING

Roast chicken is undoubtedly "finger lickin' good." It is one of the most nutritious and economical meats. Cooked chicken contains high quality protein and is also an excellent source of the important B vitamin, niacin. And, what's more, chicken contains less fat than most other meats — 90 g (3 oz.) of cooked chicken meat yields only 115 calories.

Chicken is usually a good buy all year. It's available in your supermarket either fresh or frozen, whole or half birds, quarters or pieces.

Roasting tests on whole chickens in regular and microwave ovens were recently conducted in the food labs of the Food Advisory Division, Agriculture Canada. Roasting in dry heat brings out the flavor of chicken to its fullest and it's easy to do.

First stuff and truss the chicken, brush with butter or oil and sprinkle with pepper and paprika. But remember, the chicken need not be stuffed if you just want to serve the meat or use it in a casserole. Stuffing can always be prepared in a separate dish if desired.

Ann Thomassen, the food consultant at the Food Advisory Division who directed the testing, recommends the following guidelines:

ROASTING CHICKEN

For oven roasting, place the bird breast side up on a rack in a shallow pan and roast at 160° C. (325° F.) according to the timetable below. You can baste with the drippings for extra juiciness.

For microwave roasting, place the bird breast side up on a non-metallic roasting rack or inverted plate in a heat-resistant glass baking dish. Roast according to the accompanying timetable. Cook the chicken for half the recommended cooking time and then turn breast side down. Allow the bird to stand 15 to 20 minutes, tightly covered with foil, after removing from the oven to complete cooking.

ROASTING TIMETABLE
ROASTING TIMES

Mass	Microwave (700w) on full power (minutes)	Oven at 160°C (325°F) (hours)
1 kg (about 2 lbs.)	11 to 15	1.25 to 1.5
2 kg (about 4½ lbs.)	25 to 26	2 to 2.5
3 kg (about 6½ lbs.)	36 to 38	2.25 to 2.5

Stuffed and unstuffed chickens require the same time to cook. Begin testing for doneness at the shorter time within the range.

Surely the tempting aroma that fills the kitchen will be your first hint that the chicken is done.

But there are other ways of checking to see if it is done. Press the thick parts of the drumstick and if it feels soft, the bird is done. The leg should move readily when you twist it.

For more accurate cooking times, use a meat thermometer and check the temperature in the stuffing or thigh. Stuffed chicken should reach a temperature of 70° C. (165° F.) during the standing time.

Roasting chicken is so easy to do you'll be tempted to serve it often.

Finnish scientists say: Baldness can be halted.

LONDON — Two Finnish scientists say they have designed a scalp treatment that can halt baldness and even start new hair growing in many cases.

The scientists, who are putting the treatment on sale in the form of a solution, say that among volunteers who applied it to their scalp for 28 weeks, hair growth resumed in 60 per cent of the cases and hair loss decreased within four weeks.

The product called Bioscal, contains a synthetic detergent, which clears away dead hair and other dirt clogging the follicles — the tiny sacs in which hair grows.

Another ingredient, a compound, then sets in motion a process which allegedly results in the growth of new hair.

Remember Pheasant under Glass?

craig claiborne

The oddments of table settings and serving pieces can at times be as fascinating as the foods that come from the kitchen. Random items that come to mind are chopstick rests; those squat-bottomed ship's decanters; Western-style knife and fork rests (generally made of cut-glass prisms, the use of which Marcel Proust once called "an exceedingly vulgar, middle-class custom); and rince-verres, crystal containers for guests to use in rinsing their glasses between different wine services, now mostly bought by collectors.

We hadn't given even a fleeting thought to those dishes served "sous cloche" in a long time until a recent luncheon in a neighbor's house. There on her shelf were six glass "cloches" or bells, sitting properly on their copper baking dishes and neatly arranged on a kitchen shelf.

Of the origin of dishes "sous cloche" I am not certain. But in my childhood they seemed, to my mind at any rate, the ultimate thing in sophistication. One spoke of breast of guinea hen under glass or, as it were, "sous cloche" and I presumed in those early years that that must be how all of royalty dined.

It was not until much later that I realized that the use of "cloches" or bells for baking and serving certain dishes is probably of American origin. Or that, like Proust's knife and fork rests, "an exceedingly vulgar, middle-class custom."

The only recipe, in fact, that I have ever seen for such a service is included in Irma Rombauer's Joy of Cooking (Bobbs-Merrill Co., 1975). The recipe is titled "Mushrooms under Glass," and specifies that, even if you don't have a specially designed "cloche," you can perform the routine if you have "an ovenproof glass bowl that fits closely over a baking dish."

Our hostess at that recent luncheon stated that she had fallen heir to the glass bells, originally owned by her mother-in-law. Our friend had never used them, "but they do make an interesting decoration."

Pierre Franey, among those present, said that he had never heard of anything "sous cloche" until he came to this country in 1939 and worked briefly at the Waldorf Astoria as a night chef for room service.

In those days, dishes served in such a manner were quite popular with the room service guests. The dishes were also called "a la buee" or "steamed." Buee is the mist that accumulates on windshields when they are "steamed up." The principal dishes served "sous cloche" or "a la buee" were breasts of guinea hen Souvaroff and so on, the Souvaroff assembly including foie gras, truffles and a Madeira sauce.

In this day of nouvelle cuisine, based as it is on simplicity of preparation, the doing away of frou-frou and "theatre," it is unlikely that dishes "sous cloche" or "a la buee" will ever come back in vogue. Thus jettisoned, another romantic dream of childhood and pretensions of elegance. Briefly, however, here is Mrs. Rombauer's recipe (much tailored) for how to cook those mushrooms under glass:

Blend butter with parsley, salt, paprika, and a bit of lemon juice. Smear four rounds of toast with half this. Smear a pound of mushroom caps with the remaining butter. Place the toast in small baking dishes. Add the mushrooms and heavy cream. Fit the glass bells in place and bake about twenty minutes. Add a touch of dry sherry to each serving and serve hot.

'Question of Time' Before Wormburgers

CHICAGO (AP) — The owner of Earthworms Inc. said Thursday that he is adding "Wormburgers" to the 100 recipes he has for using protein-rich dried worms as food supplements.

A fast-food chain has denied rumors that it used ground red worms in its hamburgers. But Darrell Richards, owner of Earthworms, said it's a "question of time before dried worms will take their place on the diet."

People already eat snails, oysters, octopus, squid and shrimp, and dried worms will mix with any kind of cooking, he said.

Richards, 43, said he cooks worm cookies and worm cakes at home about once a week.

"I like them and so do my two children who are nine and 11," he said. "But my wife doesn't go for it yet. For dinner tonight, I'm going to mix one-tenth cup of dried earthworms to a quarter pound of hamburger and call it a 'Wormburger'."

Richards said he sells about 1.5 million worms a week at his suburban Elk Grove operation for a variety of uses and has received about 50 inquiries about using them as food for humans.

"The main thing in their preparation is to boil them for five or six minutes to remove the dirt," he said. "Then put them in a 350-degree oven for 15 minutes. They come out crispy, like a french fry. I like to eat them just like that."

Handicapped Park Opened

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A new city park is specifically designed for handicapped children.

Picnic tables and sandboxes are elevated for wheelchairs, as are waterfountains. Swings are propelled by hand, not foot; and children can be strapped into the merry-go-round with their wheelchairs.

MACARONI LOAF TO SERVE 50

2½ pounds elbow macaroni
2 cups butter
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons salt
Freshly ground pepper
1 gallon milk
6 eggs, beaten
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped pimientos
½ cup chopped parsley
12 ounces sharp Cheddar cheese, grated

Cook macaroni as directed. Drain. Melt butter and stir in flour, salt and pepper to taste. Add milk and cook stirring constantly, until thickened and smooth. Add a little hot sauce to eggs; then return to remaining sauce. Continue to cook and stir for 5 minutes. Add onion, pimientos, parsley and cheese. Remove from heat and stir until cheese is melted. Combine with macaroni. Pour into 2 pans (20x12x2 inches) and bake in 350°F. oven 25 minutes. Serve with tomato sauce.

Serves 50.

Old-Fashioned Way Beats the Store Versions

By MIMI SHERATON

If strawberry Jell-O and chocolate pudding, pretzels and potato chips, ketchup and Fig Newtons seem hardly worth the attention of serious gastronomes, it is only because those commonplace, store-bought standbys have acquired bad reputations based on the commercialized version sold in packages.

But, believe it or not, each of those foods and dozens of others besides are based on authentic and delectable homemade originals.

There should be as much satisfaction gained from working a yeast dough into crisp yet chewy salt-encrusted pretzels as there is in making French bread. And slimly cut, crisply fried potato chips, served hot and freshly made with steak and salad, should earn the cook as much praise as the production of perfect pommes soufflés.

Chocolate pudding based on the finest, richest, darkest bitter chocolate and mellow cocoa, simmered in milk, scented with vanilla and gently bound with cornstarch (a type of pudding known as a flummery in England) is as far removed from the packaged verson as canned liver spread is from fresh pate de foie gras.

Cassoulet, because you can say it in French, may seem like a company dish worth preparing from scratch. But pork and beans, to most, seem to mundane it might as well be purchased canned. Yet homemade with smokey bacon, spiced with cloves and fragrant with onion, caramelized with molasses and ever so faintly needled with vinegar, this New England favorite could become an equally fashionable dish, at last among those secure in their own tastes.

As an extra bonus, consider that by now at least three generations have grown up never suspecting that these factory-produced foods were ever made at home by real people. Watching them evolve will be something of a revelation, especially to childre. Then, too, any of these originals can be prepared without the colorings and fillers, emulsifiers and preservatives usually found in commercial counterparts.

Potato chips were first devised in the 19th century at Noon's Lake House, a resort hotel in Saratoga, N.Y., and were known, as Saratoga chips.

Saratoga Potato Chips

3 large Idaho baking potatoes
Vegetable oil, for deep frying
Salt

1. Peel baking potatoes Rinse in cold water. Slice crosswise into rounds that are tissue-thin and uniform. Do this by hand or with the cutter known as a mandolin, available in cookware shops. You can also use a vegetable slicer that works by hand or attaches to an electric mixer. A food processor is unsatisfactory as it is not possible to fit a large, whole potato into the feeder funnel and therefore you cannot get round slices.

2. Soak sliced potatoes in several changes of very cold water for two hours, adding ice cubes to the last change of water. Turn potato slices into a towel and dry each very thoroughly on both sides.

3. Fill a deep-fat fryer with vegetable oil to a depth of three inches. Heat to 375 degrees.

4. Using a frying basket, fry a few potato slices at a time, shaking the basket to avoid sticking, until golden brown. This should take about four to five minutes per batch.

5. Drain on paper towels and continue frying remaining slices, being sure fat remains at a constant 375 degrees. Salt just before serving.

Note: These are best warm and are wonderful accompaniments to steak and hamburgers. Do not expect these to stay crisp as long as the commercial potato chips.

Pork and Beans

2½ pounds pea beans or navy beans
1 pound lean salt pork
1½ cups molasses
1 tablespoon dry mustard
1 tablespon salt
1½ teaspoons black pepper
¼ cup white vinegar
1 large onion
5 cloves.

1. Follow instructions as to soaking on the package of pea or navy beans. Cover beans (soaked or unsoaked) with fresh water, bring to a boil, cover and simmer gently until almost completely tender, about one and one-half hours, but before skins burst. Preheat oven to 275 degrees.

2. Drain beans well. Blanch lean salt pork in boiling water for 10 minutes. Drain. Cut three thin slices from slab and cut slices into large dice. Score rind on the remaining slab.

3. Combine molasses, dry mustard, salt, black pepper and vinegar in a bowl and mix well. Stud onion with cloves. Place about one-third of the diced pork pieces on the bottom of an 18-cup earthenware bean pot. Add about one-third of the beans and one-third of the molasses mixture.

4. Add more pork bits and continue layering beans, molasses mixture and pork until pot is full. Bury onion in the middle of the pot. Add scored pork, burying most of it in the top layer of beans. Add enough boiling water to come to the level of the beans.

5. Cover with a tight-fitting lid. Bake at 275 degrees for five to seven hours. Add more boiling water during baking if top beans become dry. Bake uncovered for the last 30 to 45 minutes so bacon rind will become crisp.

Yield: 10 to 12 servings.

Note: These beans can be made without pork, simply by eliminating that ingredient. If you do so, add two or three tablespoons vegetable oil or butter, distributing the fat among the layers. Or substitute two or three smoked beef knockwursts for the pork. Slice the wursts and distribute them through the beans, but do not put any on the top layer. For the last 30 minutes of baking, take one extra knockwurst, score it in several places and stick it into the top layer of beas so it will brown.

Double Chocolate Pudding

2 ounces bitter chocolate pieces, or 2 squares bitter baking chocolate
1 cup minus 2 tablespoons sugar
2 cups milk
⅛ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons cornstarch
3 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa
2 tablespoons unsalted butter, cut in small pieces ½ teaspoon vanilla
whipped cream, garnish
shaved semisweet chocolate, garnish.

1. Chop or grate chocolate. Melt in the top of a double boiler over gently boiling water. (The water should just barely touch the bottom of upper pot.)

2. Slowly stir in sugar, one and two-thirds cups of milk and salt. Heat, stirring, until chocolate is melted and mixture is blended, about seven minutes.

3. While mixture heats, sift cornstarch and cocoa together and stir into one-third cup cold milk until dissolved. Stir slowly into hot chocolate milk. Keep stirring constantly and gently for seven to eight minutes, or until pudding thickens and almost mounds.

4. Cover and cook, without stirring, for about 10 minutes. Remove top of double boiler from bottom and gently stir pieces of butter into pudding. (If you use salted butter, eliminate salt from recipe.)

5. Cool slowly for five to seven minutes, then very gently stir in vanilla. Pour into individual cups or a single bowl. If you do not like skin on top of pudding, cover top with waxed paper so none will form. Cool; chill five to seven hours. Serve with whipped cream and shavings of dark semisweet chocolate.

Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

New York Times

HAM PASTA

8 ounces (4 cups) broad noodles
3⅓ cups water
1 bouillon cube
1½ cups cubed cooked ham
1 2-oz. jar pimiento strips (optional)
1 teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoons dry mustard
½ teaspoon of oregano
Dash of Tabasco
1 1-lb. can cream-style corn
Chopped parsley

Combine water, bouillon cube, ham, pimientos, mustard, oregano and Tabasco in a large saucepan. Heat to boiling. Add noodles gradually, so that boiling never stops. Reduce heat and summer gently 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add corn and mix well. Simmer 10 minutes longer. Sprinkle with parsley and add salt if necessary.

Serves 4 to 6.

Bean Pasta Soup A Filling Dinner

1 cup elbow macaroni
¾ pound dried white kidney beans
Ham shank (about 2 pounds) or ham bone
Dash of dried garlic chips
4 medium-firm tomatoes, peeled and chopped
¾ teaspoon coarsely ground black pepper
¼ teaspoon sage
⅓ teaspoon thyme
1½ quarts water
⅓ cup corn oil
1 cup white wine or 1 cup consomme
1 teaspoon salt

Soak beans in water overnight; drain. Remove skin and excess fat from ham shank. In a large kettle combine beans, ham shank, garlic, 2 chopped tomatoes, ½ teaspoon pepper, the sage, thyme and water. Bring to a boil; cover and simmer gently 2 hours, or until beans are tender. Remove shank from kettle; dice meat and return to soup.

Meanwhile, in medium saucepan, combine oil, remaining 2 chopped tomatoes, the wine, salt and remaining ⅓ teaspoon pepper. Simmer, uncovered, 20 minutes. Pour into soup. Bring to a boil; add macaroni and cook 10 minutes longer, or until macaroni is tender. Serve in large soup bowls.

Serves about 8.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I've been divorced for five years. I'm 57 and look my age. I dress fashionably, am well-groomed, wear glasses and my figure is so-so. I'm no beauty, but I'm far from ugly.

I would like to get married again, but I don't care for old men, and young men don't care for me.

Don't suggest travel. I've traveled plenty and all I ever meet are other women looking for eligible men. Don't tell me to develop my personality. I've got more personality than most men I know. Don't suggest singles clubs, computer-dating bureaus or those match-maker agencies; they're all frauds who belong in jail. Don't tell me to get contact lenses. I've tried them and can't wear them. And don't tell me to dye my hair. I think dyed hair looks cheap.

What can you do for me?

WANTS A MAN

DEAR WANTS: Not much, lady. But if I find a man who's looking for a woman who anticipates all the questions and knows all the answers, I'll let you know.

DEAR ABBY: I am a clock-watcher out of necessity as are many other working wives and mothers.

Most employees do not object to working a little overtime occasionally, but some bosses consistently start dictating five minutes before quitting time. And some people run into stores just as the doors are closing, and are annoyed if the clerks seem less than co-operative. Working people have time commitments, baby sitters, hair appointments, errands, dinner dates, hungry husbands, etc., based on the assumption that their working day ends at 5 p.m. and not 5:20.

Abby, you could rid the world of much confusion and frustration if you suggested that each person try to manage his own time so it won't overlap onto someone else's. It's just a matter of organization and consideration.

HARDWORKING CLOCK-WATCHER

DEAR CLOCK-WATCHER: I agree. Last-minute dictation should be held to a minimum. But an employer can't be expected to halt operations and clear the store of customers so that the help can zoom out the door at 5 o'clock sharp.

DEAR ABBY: Please settle an argument between my sister and me. Recently there was a wedding in the family. My sister and her husband were invited, but the husband couldn't make it, so my sister took her 11-year-old daughter instead.

None of the other children in the family was invited and you can be sure there were plenty of hurt feelings. My sister insists that as long as her husband wasn't able to make it, substituting her daughter was perfectly all right.

I told my sister if the bride and groom wanted her daughter at the wedding they would have invited her, and only those people whose names appear on the invitation are invited.

What do you say?

NO SUBSTITUTIONS

DEAR NO: I vote with you.

I work in a dye factory. Whenever I touch one particular dye, my hands break out and become red and painfully irritated. In all the years I've been handling dyes this had never happened before. Is it possible to be allergic to only one dye and not to others? — Mr. N.L.

Dear Mr. L.:

The condition you describe certainly sounds very much like a "contact dermatitis." This is an inflammatory reaction to the skin, due to some irritating substance. It is not unlike the contract dermatitis that afflicts people who have an allergic reaction to poison ivy, sumac or poison oak.

It is highly possible for you to be sensitive to one dye and not to another. There may be some slight chemical difference in one dye to which you are highly sensitive. Most people with contact dermatitis have difficulty in isolating the particular substance that affects them. Fortunately, you are one of the favored few who has found the offending substance (allergen) and can now avoid it.

The obvious method of prevention, of course, is to stay away from that particular dye, or wear protective gloves when working with it.

How serious is bleeding from the rectum? — Mr. S.W.

Dear Mr. W.:

The most frequent cause of rectal bleeding is some form of hemorroids. The blood that is seen is bright red. This is usually an indication that the bleeding is not serious in origin. Polyps in the rectal area are another common reason for bleeding.

Yet is is absolutely essential that the cause of recurring episodes of bleeding be pinpointed, in order to be sure that some more serious underlying condition does not exist.

Cheddar cheese is sold according to the length of time it has been held for aging. Mild cheddar is aged for two to three months; medium cheddar for about four to five months and old cheddar for at least nine months and often longer.

This is some of the information gleaned from the eight-page folder Canadian Cheddar Cheese. The folder also describes how different types of cheddar are produced and offers advice on buying and storing cheese.

To enjoy the full flavor of cheese, allow it to come to room temperature before serving. Cheese toughens in high heat; therefore, cheese dishes should be cooked at moderate temperatures and cheese melted over low heat. Furthermore, avoid overcooking.

You will also find an assortment of recipes from golden cheese slices, to be served as hors d' oeuvres, to a cheese and noodle pie, which is a super cheddar supper. In addition, there are recipes for soups, sauces, fondues, cheddar party treats and desserts. These include apple-cheddar coffee cake and cheese nut cookies.

To obtain a copy of Canadian Cheddar Cheese, write to: Food Advisory Division, Agriculture Canada, Sir John Carling Building, Ottawa, Ont. K1A 0C5.

Please indicate your postal code and allow at least two to three weeks for delivery.

BODY CHEMICAL CONTROLS FAT?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A chemical transmitted through the brain seems to tell the body when to stop eating and if that message isn't delivered the result may be compulsive overeating and obesity, says a Nobel Prize-winning researcher.

A distinct relationship between gross overeating and a shortage of cholecystokinin — a hormone that seems to turn off the urge to eat — was found in laboratory animals, Dr. Rosalyn Yalow of the Bronx Veterans Administration Hospital in New York said Wednesday.

The research suggests a similar biochemical imbalance may exist in overweight people, she said, but that has not been proven.

The results of the research will be presented Friday during a conference on psychosomatic medicine at the Neuropsychiatric Institute of the University of California at Los Angeles.

Iranian Rebels' Arms Caches Seized

TEHRAN (AP) — Iranian government troops were reported to have seized an arms cache in the holy Moslem city of Mashhad amid fears of violent street protests beginning this weekend against Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's rule.

The official Pars news agency quoted the martial law administration in the northeastern city as saying several persons were arrested. Mashhad has been the scene of bloody clashes between troops and Islamic zealots battling the monarch in recent weeks.

Pars said the arms included grenades, handguns and ammunition. Anti-shah pamphlets were also seized, it said.

There were unconfirmed reports in Tehran that troops and agents of SAVAK, the shah's secret police, have uncovered other arms caches in the capital.

Well-informed diplomatic sources said some weapons have reached opponents of the shah since violent opposition to his reign erupted in January. But the sources stressed there has been little evidence that the monarch's foes are well armed.

Ministers Named

LISBON (Reuter) — President Antonio Ramalho Eanes swore in his secretaries of state on Wednesday to complete Portugal's 10th government since the 1974 coup. Prime Minister Carlos Mota Pinto, 42, a law professor, and his 15-man cabinet officially took office a week ago.

Official sources said an urban terrorist group known as the People's Suicide Squad is known to possess weapons believed obtained from Arab radicals.

The organization is linked with anti-shah extremists led by Ayatullah Khomaini, 78, spritual leader of Iran's 32 million Shiite Moslems and spearhead of the anti-shah movement from his exile base in Paris.

Embassies in Tehran warned their nationals to stay off the streets during the Moslem holy month of Moharram which begins Saturday and to stockpile food and other essentials.

Religious fervor among Shiite Moslems traditionally runs high during Moharram and authorities fear it could erupt into another spasm of bloodshed.

The military-led government of Gen. Gholam-Reza, a supporter of the shah, has banned all religious processions during Moharram and the following Moslem month of Safar ending Jan. 29.

But many observers fear the military's hard line could provoke more violence than it prevents.

Carter Cuts Arms Deals

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Carter Wednesday announced new goals for reducing overseas sales of conventional weapons during the coming year, but said future U.S. cutbacks will depend on co-operation from other nations selling arms.

The announcement, in a written statement, is the clearest expression yet of a developing shift from self-imposed and unilateral arms sale restraints to a policy that would depend on international agreement.

Previous administrations considerd formal U.S. commitments to restrain weapons sales to be impractical because there was no sign that other nations would go along. But 'Carter initially took the view that the United States, as the world's largest arms merchant, should put its own house in order and only later seek co-operative arrangements.

So far, the Carter administration's atempts to convince other supplier nations have been unsuccessful.

European countries, some of hich are highly dependent on arms exports in foreign trade, have declined to join the U.S. effort and have shown little interest in a multilateral program of control over arms sales along U.S. lines.

The U.S.-Soviet talks on conventional arms transfer, which showed promise several months ago, are scheduled to resume Tuesday in Mexico City without much prospect of early progress.

Informed administration officials said this round of talks will be shorter than other recent U.S.-Soviet meetings on the same topic. The officials are no longer hopeful, as they were this summer, that the coming round may achieve "concrete results" toward superpower limitation on weapons sales.

In his statement Wednesday, Carter noted he had previously told the United Nations that "we could not go very far alone" toward restraining weapons transfers. He added that international co-operation remains essential to curbing arms sales, and said the United States is "making a maximum effort" to achieve it.

His statement announced a fiscal year 1979 ceiling of $8.434 billion on U.S. weapons sales to all but closely allied countires, a slight reduction in dollar terms from the past year's $8.551 ceiling and a reduction of 8 percent when adjusted for inflation.

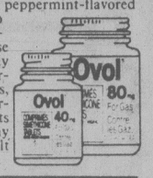
WHEN GAS IS A PROBLEM, reach for fast-acting, extra-strength OVOL 80 mg tablets. OVOL 80 mg tablets are peppermint-flavored chewable tablets that go to work right away to dissipate the pockets of trapped stomach gas that cause bloating and flatulence. So if you're occasionally troubled by gas discomfort as a result of overeating, eating too quickly or too many spicy foods, remember that OVOL 80 mg tablets (and regular-strength OVOL 40 mg tablets) are the only products available for the relief of gas alone. As with any medical product, should symptoms persist, consult your family physician.



HOLIDAY ENTERTAINING? Here's a recipe for hors d'oeuvres to make ahead and freeze until required. 3 cups Tea-Biskmix; 1 lb. sausage meat; 1 lb. grated sharp cheese; 1 chopped onion; salt; pepper; ¾ cup milk. Lightly brown sausage meat and onion, add to mix with cheese. Mix well, add milk. Form into balls. Freeze until required. Bake 450° 10-15 minutes.

RONSON PUTS AN END TO THE WASTE OF DISPOSABLE LIGHTERS. I'm happy to see that Ronson Products of Canada is in step with society and has taken a long hard look at the waste inherent with disposable products. Ronson, the leader in the lighter field, has succeeded in producing an alternative to the disposable lighter with its new refillable lighter called the Refil-a-Lite. This little beauty has been built to last for years and a single can of butane should last an average smoker for a year. This stylish alternative to disposable lighters has a suggested retail price of only $4.49... so give a Ronson Refil-a-Lite to all and to all a good time.

CURRIED NUTS. ¼ cup oil; 1 tbsp. curry powder; 1 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce; ⅛th tsp. cayenne; 2 cups assorted shelled nuts. Combine oil, curry, cayenne, Worcestershire in pan. Heat until very hot. Stir in nuts, stirring until well coated. Pour into baking pan lined with brown paper. Bake at 300° about 10 minutes, until crisp.

'Emotional Overload' in Frisco

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Staggered by slaughter in Guyana and murders in City Hall, residents are struggling with depression and fears the suicide rate will skyrocket during the coming holidays, officials and clergy say.

"I've never seen anything like it," Valerie Waidler said Wednesday over the jangle of telephones at the San Francisco Suicide Prevention Centre where she has worked for nine years.

"We're seeing an awful lot of depression and confusion among the population," she said. "We're getting the news so quickly that it is very difficult for people to assimilate it. It's like an emotional overload."

First came the mass murder-suicides on Nov. 18 of more than 900 Peoples Temple members, many from the San Francisco Bay area, and then this week the slayings of Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk in their City Hall offices.

City Coroner Dr. Boyd Stephens said San Francisco, with its Golden Gate Bridge, "tends to draw more than the normal amount of suicides."

"People come from miles away — from other states even — to kill themselves here."

In the 12 months ending last June, there were 194 suicides and 233 the previous year, he said. "Right now we're down but we're going to have at least 190 this year," Dr. Stephens said.

As of Wednesday, there was no evidence any suicide was directly related to the Guyana slaughter or the slayings, "but there's always that possibility," he said.

Ms. Waidler, supervisor of 140 volunteers who tend telephones 24 hours a day, seven days a week, said calls have increased dramatically since reports of the Guyana slaughter. The normal 60 crisis calls a day, Ms. Waidler said, increased by one-third to about 80 a day.

Calls come from friends and family of the Peoples Temple victims, she said. But many are from citizens simply overwhelmed by the scope of the slaughter.

. . . As Jonestown Living Trickle Back

Washington Post

NEW YORK — Seven of the hundreds who followed the Rev. Jim Jones to the Guyana jungle came back to the United States Wednesday night.

The first survivors of the Jonestown Peoples Temple to return to the United States range in age from 61 to 79. They looked dazed as they left their plane and none would speak to the crowd of reporters except Grover Davis, 79, who said he felt fine.

Hyacinth Thrash, 76, whose illness worried U.S. government officials, and another woman left the Pan Am plane that brought them here, in wheelchairs.

But despite their advanced ages and 5½ hours on an airplane, they were in "good condition considering what they had been through," Dr. Leon Star said. Star, director of Kennedy airport's medical office, examined the Peoples Temple survivors on the plane before they disembarked.

They were also questioned aboard the plane by FBI and Secret Service agents.

FBI spokesman Quentin Ertel said this was the first opportunity for agents to interview these survivors as part of their investigation into the murder of Rep. Leo Ryan (Dem.-Calif.) 11 days ago, an incident that immediately preceded the deaths by poison and gunshots of Jones and more than 900 of his followers.

The social services workers gave the survivors tickets to California and accompanied them. They had been asked to help by the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

NOW YOU'LL NEVER HAVE TO MISS THE GREAT THINGS ON TELEVISION AGAIN.

RCA ANNOUNCES SELECTAVISION 400.

The Video Cassette Recorder that turns on and off and changes channels for a whole week...all by itself.

Think of the last time there was something too good to miss on television. And you missed it.

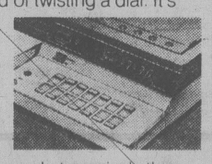
Think of the four shows you want to put on video tape this week. The game on Monday, the special on Wednesday, perhaps the Friday movie, or something educational for the kids.

SelectaVision 400 hooks up to any T.V. to record any program and play it back whenever you want it. It will record what you're watching, record one channel while you watch another. Even record while you're asleep or away.

Now, simply by touching a few buttons, you program your selections into the timer of the incredible new SelectaVision 400. The rest is automatic. The 400 will turn itself on at kick-off time, silently record the game, then turn itself off. When it's time for your second selection, the 400 turns itself to the proper channel and starts recording again—automatically. The entire schedule is preset by you up to a whole week in advance—as many as four different shows or even the same program for seven straight days.

New electronic tuning

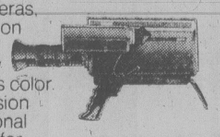
A new programmable timer isn't all that's new about the 400. Now, for example, you select channels by pushing a button instead of twisting a dial. It's electronic. And so is the 400's new tape indexing system. The 400 will automatically cue up the program you record at precisely the right point.



New color cameras

Now you've got more options than ever in SelectaVision optional equipment. To start with, there are two new black-and-white cameras, one with a Canon zoom lens.

But the really exciting news is color. Now SelectaVision offers two optional color cameras for your home productions, one with a Canon zoom lens (plus an electronic viewfinder that lets you see exactly what you're recording). All cameras are lightweight, have built-in microphones, and a price that's easy to handle. With the introduction of these new cameras, RCA has made in-home video taping very affordable.

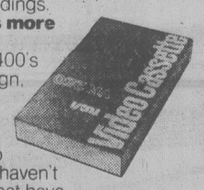


Up to four hours on a single cassette

Remember, SelectaVision 400 lets you record up to four hours on one cassette. So, with SelectaVision 400, there shouldn't be any cassette-changing interruptions in your favourite shows. Nor any missed endings.

And the 400 has more to offer

One look at the 400's intelligent new design, and you know you're dealing with a whole new generation of video recorders. But, we haven't left out the things that have made SelectaVision so popular. Like a remote pause control—you can start and stop SelectaVision from up to 20 feet away. Direct-drive motor for precise operation. And the special circuit that automatically compensates for changing signal strength.



It's all there in the new 400. Go see it at your RCA SelectaVision dealer. Now you can have the best of television—for a whole week at a time. On the new SelectaVision 400. The 4-hour video cassette recorder with the 7-day memory.

Let RCA turn your television into SelectaVision.™

UN Talks Trip Over SW Africa

UNITED NATIONS (Reuter) — South African Foreign Minister Roelof (Pik) Botha has cancelled a second meeting with UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim after saying Wednesday there are new problems regarding UN plans for supervision of elections in Namibia (South-West Africa).

Botha, who did not say what the problems were, headed for Washington after cancelling the meeting.

South African officials said only that Botha will confer with their embassy staff in Washington, but other sources said he will probably have another meeting with U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance, whom he met in New York Monday.

Diplomatic sources said they do not expect Botha to return to the United Nations after his Washington trip.

They said he wants to refer to the South African cabinet a number of questions raised by Waldheim, which he was not authorized to answer during his visit.

These included a request for a firm date when UN troops could enter Namibia to begin the process by which the United Nations would supervise elections.

Waldheim wants South Africa, which rules Namibia, to commit itself to a firm date when UN troops will be allowed to move into the territory to start a process leading to its independence after elections supervised by the UN.

South Africa has agreed to the elections, but wants the United Nations to set a date for voting on the understanding that once fixed that date may not be changed, even if South African troop strength has not been reduced.

POPE MEETS BLACK REBELS

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II met four leaders of southern African black nationalist movements, the leaders reported today.

The secret audience Wednesday, granted at the leaders' request, was held in the Apostolic Palace, and marked the first bold political act of the Polish-born pontiff.

The meeting was announced by Oliver Tambo, president of the African National Congress, and George Silundika, a member of the executive of the National Patriotic Front, the organization opposing Prime Minister Ian Smith's government in Rhodesia.

The other two leaders present at the 20-minute private audience granted by the Pope were Kumbirai Kangai, secretary of social services and transport of the Patriotic Front, and Sam Nujoma, president of the South-West African People's Organization.

The leaders told a news conference they drew the Pope's attention to alleged violations of human rights in southern Africa. The Pope, they said, was greatly concerned with the situation of human rights in southern Africa.

The audience brought immediate memories of a similar act in 1970 by Pope Paul VI, who met with leaders of nationalist groups fighting in the Portuguese African territories of Angola, Mozambique and Guinea-Bissau.

That audience dealt a blow to the overwhelmingly Roman Catholic Portuguese government, and led to the temporary recall of its ambassador to the Holy See.

ISRAELIS PROTEST PRICES

TEL AVIV (AP) — Business slowed down, but did not stand still, during a three-hour strike Wednesday by Israeli consumers protesting high prices. A spokesman for the group organizing the strike said the protest was against high prices caused by the government's economic policies. Food prices are rising because the government is removing subsidies from basic foodstuffs.

ZAMBIA CLAIMS BAGGING COPTER

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — Black guerillas shot down seven Rhodesian aircraft last week and killed a total of 50 soldiers, guerrilla leader Joshua Nkomo said today.

A Rhodesian military spokesman denied Nkomo's claim his forces shot down a French-made helicopter with two soldiers on board as it flew over a guerrilla camp in Zambia, but there was no government comment about the other claims. Both soldiers died, Nkomo said.

Nkomo, leader of the Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU), told reporters today of the following actions against the Rhodesian army Nov. 18-24.

—On Nov. 18, the guerrillas killed 18 Rhodesian soldiers in an ambush on a military convoy 88 kilometres from the Victoria Falls Road.

—On Nov. 20, 30 soldiers died when ZAPU shot down a Dakota plane and two jets escorting it in northwestern Rhodesia.

—On Nov. 21, a police reserve aircraft "was downed."

—On Nov. 22, guerrillas shot down a reconnaissance spotter plane near Karoi.

—On Nov. 24, a jet bomber was hit and fell near a ZAPU base in Rhodesia.

'Stable' Unity Planned

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Rhodesia's bi-racial transitional government announced today that a government coalition made up of blacks and whites will be set up following majority-rule elections due to be held on April 20 of next year.

In a statement read to reporters by Prime Minister Ian Smith, the transitional government said a "government of national unity" will be necessary to assure political stability.

Every political party that emerges from the election in April with five or more seats in parliament will be entitled to representation in the cabinet, the statement said.

Under constitutional plans being drawn up for the parliament of a black-majority-ruled Zimbabwe, the minority whites have been guaranteed 28 seats in a 100-seat House of Assembly.

Asked whether these 28 whites would take part in the new government, Smith replied: "Of course."

Terms Listed For Nicaragua

MANAGUA (UPI) — Nicaragua's political opposition today accepted an international proposal for a plebiscite on whether President Anastasio Somoza should stay in office but said Somoza would have to leave the country for the voting campaign.

The Broad Opposition Front also said the government must accept its conditions within 10 days. Failure to do so would be considered a break in the negotiations.

Somoza met U.S. mediator William G. Bowdler Wednesday, but the government side has until noon today to tell Bowdler, Dominican Foreign Minister Vice Adm. Ramon Emilio Jimenez Jr. and former Guatemalan Foreign Minister Alfredo Obiols if it accepts the plebiscite idea.

The Front said it accepted the plebiscite proposal, even though it had turned it down once, because it is confident that a referendum will result in a "massive repudiation of the Somoza regime."

The document delivered by the Front to the mediators is accompanied by an annex containing 13 additional conditions, the first of which is that Somoza get out of the country during the campaign for a plebiscite and that he hand over the presidency to an interim president for the period.

Celine Meets Success But. . .

By JAMES NELSON
Canadian Press

OTTAWA — The lady is wearing blue jeans and a black turtleneck, trying not to look glamorous. She's 25, a dark-eyed beauty with longish straight hair which she tousles in the excitement of conversation.

She is Celine Lomez of Montreal and Quebec City, winner of two Best Actress nominations in the Canadian Film Awards for her roles in The Silent Partner, now in first runs, and Joyce Wieland's The Far Shore in 1976.

She's the girl who appeared recently on the cover of Maclean's wearing a see-through blouse.

Her story is typical, perhaps, of many aspiring young performers and the pitfalls that exist in building a career.

When she was 11, far too young even to be in a nightclub, she began a singing career with her twin sister, and later went on to make a number of records.

At 15, she began making movies, politely called Grade B flicks though all the attention was really on the nude scenes. She was still too young to be legally in a movie house for that kind of film in Quebec.

Her music training was all by experiment in the family kitchen.

It wasn't until after she had performed on camera that she began thinking seriously of acting lessons. And the place to go was not to the National Theatre School or anything like it, but to New York and Los Angeles.

She studied method acting in Lee Strasberg's Actor's Studio, and polished her English in Los Angeles.

But Celine Lomez would like to get onto the legitimate stage as an actress or review performer. She finds it hard, however, to make the jump from film and television drama to live theatre.

Audiences for both TV and live theatre do grow tired of the same old faces, and a face and voice on stage like Celine Lomez's, sexy and sultry, would bring a gleam to anyone's eyes.

If, that is, she is invited and can win an audition for a director who is not too heavily committed to his own stable of actors and actresses.

Goodbye, Rhoda, After 9 Years

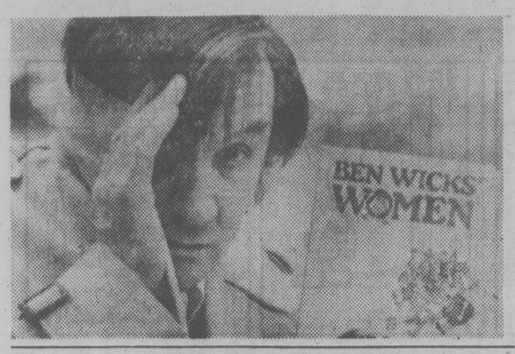
MONTREAL - Valerie Harper has been playing Rhoda for so long her fans are starting to call her by that name offstage — so after this season, she'll be Rhoda no more. Miss Harper, who broke in the character nine years ago as Mary Tyler Moore's slightly daft neighbor on the Mary Tyler Moore Show, then spun it off in a vehicle of her own, announced the show's demise Wednesday during an impromptu question-and-answer period with the Young Men's Hebrew Association. Says she, "I loved the series, but I want to move on now to other things." She says the last segment has been filmed, and no — Brenda doesn't get married.

LOS ANGELES - What promises to be the legal linchpin of the decade goes before the judge today — Michelle Triola's suit seeking half the wealth of Lee Marvin, with whom she lived in unwedded bliss for six years before he turned her out. Hollywood screenwriter Abby Mann can only empathize. He's the one who introduced the couple, during filming of Ship of Fools. Mann's own divorce from wife Harriet came through Wednesday, with a split of community property in excess of $2 million. Divorce attorney Marvin Mitchelson, who represents Miss Triola in her suit against Marvin and other women in similar suits against Alice Cooper and Nick Nolte, also represented Mann's wife.

BEVERLY HILLS - Dog trainers, lion trainers — even elephant trainers are household items around Hollywood movie sets, but a fly trainer? That's Jim Danaldson's title on the staff list for American International's new psychoghoster The Amityville Horror. He's in charge of educating a stable of about 10,000 ordinary black houseflies essential to flesh crawling in the new flick. He says he'll really need only about 5,000 of the little creepers. The rest? They're understudies — just in case their collegues blow their lines or buzz off.

MONTREAL — The key to longevity is a careful diet, moderate drinking and a regular sex life, says a doctor who learned his medicine among Indians, lumberjacks aed surveyors in Quebec's harsh north. Dr. Paul-L. Rivard, 78, appears to know what he's talking about. After 50 years as a practising physician—32 of them spent in camps in northern Quebec—he still holds a clinic once a week and vows never to retire.



Outcast cartoonist Ben Wicks is a downcast cartoonist to discover that a bookstore in Kitchener, Ont., considers his new book Ben Wick's Women to be too wicked. Following complaints the book is suggestive and sexist, the store refuses to promote it.

From King of Kensington to Queen of Kensington goes CBC performer Al Waxman (right). Life becomes a bit of a drag for actor when he dons female attire in upcoming episode of the series to set himself up as bait for a purses-natcher roaming the area. Above is Waxman as he usually appears.

I Love Me, Says Father With Six Children All Called Junior...

TAMPA, Fla. — A sixth child was born to Eugene Jerome Dupuis and his wife Katherine Wednesday, and for the sixth time, the born-again evangelist named the child after himself.

He now has three boys and three girls — all named Eugene Jerome Dupuis Junior.

"I love me," he said.

His children don't have nicknames, only numbers, one through six, ranking their birth.

He says his wife doesn't mind the numbered children.

His first children, twins, are Nos. 1 and 2 and they are now 18. Three is 11, four is 9, five is 7 and six is a day old.

This Christmas do something traditional.
Teppanyaki instead of turkey? Why not? It's still traditional. In a centuries-old ritual, your personal chef will grace the festive board with tender, flavorful Japanese-style steak. Or exquisitely seasoned shrimp, lobster and chicken.
For your holiday entertaining or an office get-together, we can arrange special appetizers or you can order complete Japanese Village Teppanyaki meals at prices ranging from $7.95 each. For everything. Special dinner selections and prices on request.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Doubles of slam contracts which are made in the fond expectation of increasing the doubler's profits usually turn out to be quite costly to the defending side. As a case in point, observe today's deal, which came up in a team-of-four match.

Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

♠ J 3
♡ A Q 5 2
◇ A 9 5

WEST	EAST
♠ 7 5	♠ 8 6 4 2
♡ J 10 9 4	♡ K 8 7 3
◇ Q 6 3 2	◇ 7

SOUTH
♠ A K Q 10 9
◇ K J 10 8 4
♣ J 8

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	4 ◇	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
6 ◇	Pass	Pass	Dble.
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♣.

The above was the bidding sequence when the deal was played originally. After winning the opening lead with his club ace, West played another club, South's jack taking the trick. Correctly interpreting West's double as showing probably four trumps headed by the queen, at trick three South led the jack of trumps. When West followed suit with the deuce, the five was played from dummy.

When the jack won the trick, South led the four of trumps, inserting the board's nine, on which East discarded a club. Next came the trump ace, after which declarer returned to the South hand via a spade. The king of diamonds now felled West's queen. Declarer then claimed his slam contract. West's telltale double had pointed the way to the winning line of play.

When the deal was replayed, the second South declarer also arrived at a six-diamond contract, although via a different sequence of bidding. But West passed instead of doubling. He elected to open the jack of hearts at trick one, which was taken by the board's ace.

Not having any clue as to which of the defenders possessed the all-important queen of trumps, declarer was faced with a pure guess as to how to play the trump suit. He made the losing guess when he decided to play dummy's ace of diamonds, intending to finesse against East's hoped-for queen on the next trump lead. When he made the second trump lead, East discarded a spade. Thus West's queen of trumps was promoted into a winner, as the ace of clubs had been all along. When play had ended, declarer had, somehow or other, gone down a couple of tricks.

SOLUTIONS FRIDAY

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Friday, December 1 By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): You overcome odds, you win with long-shots. You surprise and delight with combination of ambition, determination and humor. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure in scenario. Superior wants to make room for you at more elevated position. Submit plan, format.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): You're now able to reach more people, to get pulse of public. You locate what had been missing. You find ways of leaping over red tape. you actually may turn an apparent losing proposition into an overall win situation, Aquarian could play significant role.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Get involved — frying to sit on fence now could create confusion, loss of prestige. Accent on finances of partner, close legal contact, spouse. Cycle edges upwards — be confident, patient, persistent. Member of opposite sex does care and will prove it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Emphasis on joining forces with family ember to achieve goal. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio could figure prominently. Money is in picture and you will receive your share. Maintain low profile. Study Gemini message. Stick with number 6.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): What seems far from reach can be brought into proper focus, perspective. Key is to get together with co-workers, those who share your interests. Give "survival instinct" full rein. Spotlight on employment, dependents, relatives in transit, delayed mail or message.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Dig deep — you could strike pay dirt. Key is to accept more responsibility, to challenge and be challenged. Capricorn, Cancer individuals figure prominently — and so does the number 8. Yes, emotional involvement is very much a part of scenario.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stick to factual material. You'll be tempted by one who offers get-rich-quick scheme. Remember your own security requirements. Protect yourself in clinches. Don't give up something for nothing. Land, home are likely to be involved. You'll conclude transaction and have results of "test".

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Short trip could be on agenda. New contact proves significant. Display independence of thought, action. Leo figure prominently. Be versatile without scattering your forces. Creative endeavors now will prove successful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on personal possessions, payments, locating lost articles, collections. You're being pulled in two directions. Cancer-born individual is on your side and will share benefit of experience.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Cycle high — make contacts, proposals, new starts. Be original, independent, daring. Element of timing is with you. Trust judgment, intuition. Get off sidelines and into the game. Obese individual enters scenario, provides ideas and little else. Be selective. Choose quality.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Secrets, glamor, clandestine meetings are on agenda. Choose happiness over intrigue. Message should become startlingly clear. Another Aquarian, a Scorpio and Leo could figure prominently. Romance and love are part of scenario. You'll see!

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Accent on friends, hopes wishes, changes, intensified relationship. Gemini, Virgo figure prominently. You gain through written material. Be analytical. Check fine print, read between the lines. Change of personnel will be of aid to you.

IF DECEMBER 1 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are creative, stubborn, independent, original and, at times, you exhibit a "divine spark." Leo, Aquarius persons play key roles in your life. You locate "escape hatch" in December. You'll remember what occurred in July and you'll do something about it. In 1979, June will be your most memorable month. If single, marriage is on horizon. If married, change of residence or purchase of home stands out for next year. There also could be an addition to your family. You are spiritual as contrasted to "religious." You are dynamic, fiery, an individual to your finger tips. You also are passionate and drawn very much to challenge or gamble.

Saturday, December 2 9:00 a.m.-4:30 p.m. to show and demonstrate the full Contax/Yashica line of photo equipment.

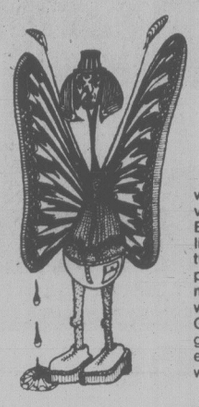
This is the FIRST CONTAX/YASHICA weekend that has been held on Vancouver Island and we are sure that you will all enjoy John and his presentation of this great line of photographic products. John is of Danish origin but even Rolf (Swedish origin) likes him. (Scandinavians will know what we mean!) Even Gritt Floss likes him.



EVEN GRITT FLOSS AGREES!
EXCEPTIONAL CAMERAS

we don't often make a definite statement that a certain product is vastly superior to another product among the many lines we carry, BUT we do feel we should, in the case of the present Contax/Yashica line, state very definitely that in terms of quality, features and value this line is the most viable on the market at this time and at the present prices. We feel that Contax/Yashica is still 'buying' its place on the market. We also feel that they have now established themselves so well that prices on these desirable products will rise quickly. The Contax/Yashica line is now, we think the strongest in the photographic industry and will dominate the market in 1979. We would earnestly suggest that purchasing this equipment at our present prices will be a wise investment.

During the two years that Contax and Yashica FR cameras have been available, we have sold a considerable number of these models and

- ★ Not one camera has been returned to us with any malfunction whatsoever
- ★ Not one customer has expressed any dissatisfaction whatsoever
- ★ No other line of equipment we have handled has had such an incredible record of reliability and customer satisfaction.

Nature Most Satisfying: B.C. Poll

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

Close contact with nature is one of the most important recreational satisfactions sought by urban British Columbians, according to a joint federal-provincial report.

The study shows that Vancouver and Victoria residents prefer hiking or beachcombing to swimming in public pools; gardening to playing on racquet ball courts, and going camping to watching TV.

Urban British Columbians feel getting rid of tensions and frustrations are the key values of a leisure activity and outdoor recreational pursuits — when available — are favored ways to achieve that goal.

But the report warns: "Many of the activities which yield such satisfactions are dependent upon a natural base that is slowly eroding."

It encourages recreational planners to extend their horizons and to keep in mind the values that are most important to residents and that are most at risk in urban areas.

Among other things, those surveyed were asked to rate a list of 32 recreational pursuits.

The report shows that travel was cited as the activity enjoyed by most Victorians. That was followed by beachcombing, reading, camping, gardening, swimming, hiking and fishing respectively.

Vancouverites differed only in that they rated skiing as one of the top eight activities, with fishing ranked as number nine.

Surfing came last in both cities. Other activities listed included having a social drink (rated 21 in Vancouver, 23 in Victoria) and going to the movies (ranked 30 in both centres).

Respondents said that camping, fishing, backpacking or hiking, gardening and beachcombing were all activities pursued mainly because they brought one closer to nature. Those activities, which all ranked in the top 10, were also rated highly for the peace and quiet they provided — qualities greatly valued by those in both urban centres.

Skiing and swimming were pursued primarily because they provided healthy exercise and were fun. Reading was rated highly for the quiet and because it contributed to personal development.

Travel was most appealing because it brought about a change of scene and was fun.

The survey, conducted by the federal habitat protection directorate and provincial fish and wildlife branch, was based on 3,000 questionnaires mailed to Vancouver homes and 1,500 mailed to Victoria residences. About 30 per cent of the households responded.

The report, which was undertaken to aid recreational planning, says the government should be responding to urban recreational needs with some long range programs.

It says those who responded to the study showed clearly that they want current recreational opportunities maintained.

"In terms of their perceived future, they are overwhelmingly concerned about the need to get rid of tensions and frustrations, to remain close to nature and to maintain health — as the pace and complexity of urban existance increases, with consequent pressure upon the individual and ties with family, friends and neighbors," states the report.

The document says that close contact with nature is one of the most important satisfactions sought by urban British Columbians, and is rated as one of the recreation satisfactions "most needed" in the future.

"Urban British Columbians view provision for nature related recreation as highly important in the province's recreational future and are likely to be strogly resistant to seeing these opportunities diminished."

The report goes on to say that sports fishing is an activity highly rated in both major cities and is one in danger of erosion.

It says that unless fishing opportunites can be provided for urban children they probably won't pursue the activity when they grow up.

It points out that hunting is an activity that has dwindled over the years because of lack of opportunity for youngsters, and "may be in a process of slow liquidation as a form of recreation for urban residents."

The recreation report, entitled A Study of Satisfaction and Substitutability in Recreation Available to Residents of Urban British Columbia, was completed this spring.

Protection Lacking For Parks

One-third of Victoria's 51 parks are without official protective status and could be removed from park use at any time in the future.

City council's parks committee chairman, Ald. Robin Blencoe, said today he was stunned recently when he undertook a review of Victoria parks.

"I found that we've got 17 parks which could disappear — and that really shocked me."

Blencoe said that there are 11 parks which aren't protected through by-law and another six which have only partial designation.

"These parks have existed for years but council hasn't put a park reservation on them in order to keep future options open."

Blencoe said the parks could easily be lost in future when pressures for land are bound to increase.

"As far as I'm concerned there are no options with peoples' parks. They're either parks or they're not parks, and if they're parks they should be protected forever."

Blencoe said that Victoria is currently well off when it comes to parkland, but that could change as population density increases, especially if some of the present green areas are lost.

"You can't play games with these parks — it's crucial to have that open space," said the alderman.

Blencoe said that in the near future he will ask council to designate the parks that are without the protection of by-law.

No Honeymoon, Couple Claims In Airline Suit

NEW YORK (AP) — A Manhattan couple has sued United Airlines for $2.5 million, claiming their "once-in-a-lifetime" honeymoon to Hawaii was ruined when the airline lost their luggage.

Martin Siegel, 37, of Manhattan, and his wife, Laura, 31, said they spent their two-week honeymoon waiting for their luggage and buying clothes to replace lost items. The luggage was returned without explanation two days after they returned home, the couple said in a suit filed in New York state Supreme Court in Manhattan.

THE
BEACH
Only a few yards to Oak Bay's most exclusive waterfront on Beach Drive overlooking the Oak Bay Marina. Spacious luxury, two bedrooms, two full bathroom apartment homes built with all the extra design features and meticulous craftsmanship that typify all of Park Pacific's many fine projects. Half of these exceptional luxury apartment homes have sold in the past few weeks, somewhat of a record considering the price range and current market conditions. There will probably never be another building of this quality, in a similar location, ever to be created again in Victoria. Don't miss this fabulous opportunity to purchase happiness and peace of mind for the rest of your life knowing you will have an investment similar to a valuable original painting or a one of a kind art piece.

Not Out to Wreck Chinatown: Firm

The company that had plans to demolish three old buildings in Chinatown says it wants to co-operate with the city of Victoria in preserving heritage structures.

In a letter to the city's Heritage Advisory Committee, Abacus Cities vice-president Leo Theofan says his company isn't out to wreck Chinatown.

He said Abacus Cities (which among other things owns the Belmont Building, the Law Chambers and Market Square) has an excellent heritage record.

Theofan said the company's request for a demolition permit to take down the three buildings, which run from 532-536 Fisgard to 529-539 Herald, was prompted by a fire marshal's report calling for major upgrading of the facilities.

"I agree the buildings are in very poor condition. However, it isn't economically feasible for Abacus to spend in excess of $150,000 to upgrade the buildings to meet the standards required," he said.

Theofan added that there are five elderly Chinese living in the buildings but they aren't paying any rent. Until five months ago the occupants had been charged $25 per month, but that fee was removed when the future of the buildings came into doubt.

Victoria council is considering officially designating the buildings as heritage sites, which would freeze the tax assessment at its present level. Abacus could then make extensive improvements without having the assessment raised.

Flooding? Check Soil Levels

jack beastall

The season of heavy rainfall should be considered a blessing for it replenishes the underground water table on which plants will draw during next growing season.

Yet many home gardeners cannot look forward with pleasure to fall and early winter storms because their back gardens soon have water laying on the surface.

This is particularly true of older gardens in James Bay, Fairfield and some parts of Oak Bay.

A person acquainted with these gardens 40 years ago remembers the time when flooding was unknown. Many were excellent vegetable gardens during the period when most home gardeners grew a good proportion of the family's food requirements.

Before marketing boards and quality standards for shipped produce came into being, retired couples and discharged servicemen were supplying their local stores with high-quality, home-grown fruits and vegetables.

Looking at the gardens today, one cannot help but notice a decided drop in soil level where the vegetable plots were located, and that drop is the reason for water collecting on the surface over winter.

The drop is caused by several factors:

A certain amount of soil remains on every vegetable root crop that is lifted; discarded vines, cabbage stumps and corn stalks, as well as weeds, have soil adhering to their roots; a natural drop occurs as the humus content is converted to chemicals used by the plants, and as digging or tilling goes a little deeper and allows more settling.

The actual drop may have been less than half an inch a year, but in 40 years that could amount to a 16 to 20 inch drop in level.

Had the original owners added sufficient humus each year to replace the losses there would be no problem in the gardens today.

This same drop in level can happen in all gardens when the owner fails to replace the normal losses each season.

Knowing what should have been done is no help in relieving the present conditions. Seeking advice, the gardener is told the only solution is to install drainage tile and dig a deep sump that will collect the water.

This might be reasonable for a low spot in an acre field, but not for a city lot.

In many instances there is no place where a large enough sump can be dug to take the quantity of water that collects, and the cost of tiles, digging the trenches and sump, filling the sump with rocks and the trenches with sand, is beyond the average home gardener's budget.

And the hollow area still remains.

At the same time the property owner has to be careful not to break municipal bylaws by accidentally diverting water to an adjacent property.

As the original cause was failure to replace losses, the best solution is to start replacing them now. This can be done by adding a load of manure or similar humus material each year, preferably.

Barnyard manure, stable manure and weed-free mushroom compost are available locally. A 10-yard load spread over the surface will lift the soil level several inches, supply the needed humus that will benefit plant growth and cost but a fraction of the outlay that would be needed for drainage tile.

After applying a load each fall for a few years, the level will return to normal, and a deep, friable loam will more than repay the outlay for the manures or compost.

Lysyk Report Ignored?

WHITEHORSE (CP) — A member of the Lysyk inquiry which studied the impact of the Alaska Highway pipeline says the federal government is pretending to follow the report's recommendations when in fact it is ignoring them.

Willard Thelps made the statement Wednesday during the taping of WHTV's Face the Media show, to be aired today:

"I say to you they're lying. They could have told me, told the public that they disagreed.

"The people who have done the best job since I was involved have been the pipeline company (Foothills Pipeline Ltd.)," said Thelps. "They've been honest."

The inquiry, headed by Kenneth Lysyk, dean of the University of British Columbia law school, included Thelps, a local lawyer, and Edith Bohmer of Whitehorse, who now works for Foothills.

Under the Pipeline Act, the government has created the Northern Pipeline Agency to regulate construction of the pipeline, but Thelps said the agency is not what the Lysyk report had recommended.

The report stressed there should be a second-stage inquiry into the socio-economic and environmental consequences of the pipeline, estimated to cost $12 billion.

Agency commissioner Mitchell Sharpe said at a news conference here in July, however, that there will be no more inquiries, just public hearings.

Margarine Giraffe? What the Man Said

TORONTO (CP) — When asked to comment on the Canada Council recently, artist Harold Town came across with a suitably low-cholestrol response.

The Canada Council is not daring enough, says he — they should be supporting the hypothetical artist who wants to create a $70,000, 700-foot giraffe out of margarine.

Meet Lyn Hancock

That's why it's so important to get quality. And that's why I chose this set of Dionite luggage for my sister. It's softside, the Bonneville I series. The vinyl's the best so even though my sister's hard on her luggage, it'll keep its shape and good looks through years of travelling. It even comes with a lock and key. Dionite top quality. The only thing I'd get for my sister.

Cranes Making Slow Comeback

GRAYS LAKE, Idaho (AP) — Every Fall, as days become shorter and air and apples grow crisper, the Grays Lake cranes go into their ritual "spiritual" before migrating.

This fall, the ritual meant more than ever to wildlife researchers. It meant a week of worry as a budding flock of endangered whooping cranes worked its way to New Mexico with adopted sandhill crane parents. For days, anxious officials waited by phones like expectant fathers, and for good reason.

More than once in this century, the whooper has been believed extinct. In 1941, only 15 birds could be found. Since the crane is native only to North America, the Canadian and United States governments and the National Audubon Society took action.

The whoopers' nesting area finally was discovered near the Yukon in 1954. Canada set aside the site now known as Wood Buffalo National Park in Alberta and the flock began to grow again.

Still, more had to be done. Since the whooper lays two eggs, and only one usually reaches maturity, wildlife biologists began removing the spare egg from nests and incubating it.

Here's how it works:

With one flock of whoopers firmly established at the Wood Buffalo park, both Canadian and U.S. officials believed a backup flock of whoopers should be nurtured along another migration route. That's where Grays Lake and Rod Drewien came in.

Drewien was intrigued by a proposal by Fred G. Bard, a Canadian naturalist, to set whooping crane eggs in the nests of sandhill cranes for hatching.

While a doctoral candidate at University of Idaho, Drewien found he could shuffle the sandhill eggs from one nest to another without problems. He also discovered that the Grays Lake sandhill was similar in size and temperament to the whooper. In 1974, he began his experiment.

Fertile whooping crane eggs were hand-carried in padded cases from Wood Buffalo and Maryland to the Idaho refuge.

To everyone's delight, the parent sandhills Drewien had selected not only hatched the eggs, but integrated the young whoopers into the family unit. The Grays Lake project was under way.

It hasn't been easy. Many whooper chicks died. Coyotes, cold weather and wire fences took their toll. Of the 61 eggs delivered to Drewien since 1975, only seven whoopers remain.

"We've removed 15 miles of wire fence that caused problems," Drewien says. "Sandhill parents would take the chicks to feed and whooper young were so tall they kept walking into the strands.

"Predators are not as big a problem now either. Tentatively we should be getting eggs through 1980 and eventually hope to have a flock of 20 pairs of whoopers here."

Among Drewien's worries, the new migration path was once the most crucial. Many feared the whooping cranes would leave their parents and veer into the Wood Buffalo flight path.

Not so. Not only have the young cranes learned to live on a sandhill's diet, they've learned their homing patterns as well.

St. Louis Paper Still Shut Down

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis was without a daily newspaper for the 10th day Wednesday while a federal mediator met with representatives of striking pressmen and the Pulitzer Publishing Co. Talks centred on a company proposal to eliminate 14 of the 154 pressmen's jobs through attrition. About 1,800 employees of the Post-Dispatch are out of work because of the strike.

THE TIMES: Symbolic As Big Ben

Britain's most famous newspaper, The Times of London — together with The Sunday Times and various supplements — suspended publication today, owing to labor trouble. Lord Thomson of Fleet, Times publisher and son of the late Canadian-born Roy Thomson, said he hoped the suspension would be temporary. The Times and The Sunday Times have about 4,000 employees.

LONDON (AP) "To me, The Times is really like the British flag," the late Canadian-born Lord Thomson said of his favorite newspaper. "The Times will go on forever."

Other newspapers may be older than The Times but none has wielded more journalistic influence than the 193-year-old morning paper which officially has a circulation of only 292,714.

The days when it was nicknamed "The Thunderer" and could topple governments are over. But life in Britain without its mixture of authoritative news reporting and quirky charm would not be the same. As symbolically British as Big Ben, the derby hat, the stiff upper lip, cricket and the rain, the gap it would leave cannot be filled by other papers.

The Times was born on Jan. 1, 1785, at a time when the British press was so rife with political corruption and bribery that novelist Sir Walter Scott said that rather than write for newspapers he would "sell gin to poor people and poison them that way."

Its founder was John Walter, an underwriter of coal vessels and a prosperous merchant whose business had failed due largely to losses in the American War of Independence. He set up a printing business near the River Thames at Blackfriars and for the first three years of the newspapers existence he called it The Daily Universal Register before changing it to The Times in 1788.

The official Story of the Times printed by the newspaper recalls it was founded "to demonstrate a new printing process — a process originally designed to reproduce lottery tickets."

It began life modestly, printing a little London news, some parliamentary news, snippets of foreign intelligence, occasional letters, a poem or two and classified advertisements. It rarely produced more than 1,500 copies a day. Only one copy of the first issue has survived. It is in the British Museum.

Walter was no free-press champion in those days of universal press corruption. His original vow that his newspaper would do nothing to wound "the ear of delicacy or corrupt the heart" and that there would be "no concealing the native deformity of vice" was soon forgotten.

In 1788, when King George III went mad, Walter was hired by the government of Prime Minister Pitt at about $600 a year — a large sum in those days — to oppose the claim of the Prince of Wales to unlimited power as regent.

Four months later, because of what he had written he was tried for libelling the Prince of Wales and the royal dukes of York and Clarence. He was fined $500 and sentenced to imprisonment and an hour in the pillory at Charing Cross. He served 16 months in Newgate jail.

His son, John Walter II, who took over management of the paper when his father retired, was made of sterner stuff. He set the paper free of the tyranny of subsidies from political parties and vested interests and established The Times reputation for incorruptible independence.

As editor, John Walter II insisted news published in The Times be the latest available and that facts must be reliable. During the Napoleonic War, a naval blockade tried to seal off England from the European continent. To beat the threatened news blackout, John Walter II hired former smugglers to carry French newspapers across the channel from the continent to his agents in the English ports of Deal and Harwich.

In 1808, he sent Henry Crabb Robinson to Spain as The Times first war correspondent and in 1812 he fostered the invention and production of the first steam-operated press. The steam press speeded up printing of The Times and it raced ahead of its competitors.

Six years later, Thomas Barnes appeared as editor to make The Times a champion of middle-class opinion. Britain's leading journal became known as "The Thunderer" because of the authoritative tone of its editorials.

Barnes was the first of a distinguished line of Times editors. But because of the John Walter II rule that contributors remain anonymous to avoid attempts at corruption, the only time Barnes' name appeared in the paper was in his obituary in 1841. The anonymity rule remained in force at The Times until 1967.

The authority of the paper grew rapidly during the Crimean War of 1853-1856. Dispatches from the battle front by Times war correspondent William Howard Russell described the appalling suffering of ill-equipped British troops and the bungling of British army leaders. The efforts inspired nurse Florence Nightingale — "the lady with the lamp" — to go to the Crimea to organize hospital services for the troops and helped bring down the government of the day, which had claimed all was going well.

Over the years the influence of The Times made it an establishment newspaper. Government ministers, whose doors stayed shut to other world-renowned journalists, opened to those from The Times.

The Sunday Times, which bills itself as "one of the world's great newspapers" and is widely respected in Britain and abroad for high investigative journalism, began life humbly.

A small-time hack journalist called Henry White launched it on Oct. 20, 1882. But as owner-editor he proved a failure.

He sold it to another flop, Daniel Whittle Harvey, a radical politician whose only claim to fame was that he libelled Prince Albert, husband of Queen Victoria. For this he was sent to jail for three months and fined $400. This was a large sum in those days and ended his career as a newspaper owner.

The paper then passed from one book publisher to another, gaining in reputation only from continuing attacks on unpopular governments of the day.

Later in Victorian times, The Sunday Times passed to theatrical impresario E. T. Smith. Under his ownership it switched to semi-literary journalism and became a highly respected quality publication.

A financier, his son and the two sons of the Duke of Cambridge succeeded as owners and the paper then passed to the uninhibited Miss Alice Cornwell.

She had a fortune from a gold strike in Australia and bought the paper, naming a journalist friend, Phil Robinson, as editor. She later married him.

The next owner was also a woman, Mrs. Frederick Beer, aunt of First World War poet Siegfried Sassoon. Mrs. Beer sold out to a company headed by a German, Herman Schmidt, in which arms dealer Sir Basil Zaharoff had a concealed interest.

Schmidt was interned by the British in 1915 during the First World War and the paper passed to the Berry brothers who had large industrial interests in Wales. William Berry who became Viscount Camrose in 1941, was appointed editor-in-chief of The Sunday Times from 1915 onward.

Under their ownership, The Sunday Times became a real success for the first time. It was the first of their great chain of newspapers stretching across the country under the name of Allied Newspapers Ltd.

In 1937, the newspaper empire grew so large that William split it with his brother James, who became Viscount Kemsley in 1945. Among the newspapers James got was The Sunday Times, which gained greatly in power and influence under his ownership.

Canadian-born publisher Roy Thomson purchased The Sunday Times and the rest of the Kemsley newspapers in 1959.

Despite similarity of names, The Sunday Times had no links with The Times until 1967 when Thomson acquired the latter, with its front page devoted to small classified advertisements. Thomson switched the front page to news.

The two papers and the three Times weekly supplements devoted to literature, education and higher education are run under a joint company called Times Newspapers Ltd. Thomson, who died in 1976, answered charges he was a monopolist by pledging that the editorial management of the two newspapers would be kept separate.

In 1890, The Sunday Times had a staff of five. Today the entire staff of Times Newspapers Ltd. numbers around 4,000.

The Sunday Times sells 1.4 million copies. But industrial disruption resulted in a total loss of nearly eight million copies this year.

In addition to its news and sports section, it publishes each week an arts section, a business news section and a glossy color magazine with lots of space devoted to photographs. The three sections total 72 pages and with the magazine sell for 50 cents.

The editor is Harold Evans, an energetic north country journalist, who took the job in 1967. Under his leadership, The Sunday Times developed in-depth investigative journalism techniques. Perhaps its biggest campaign was to get adequate compensation for scores of children who grew up horribly malformed because their mothers took the inadequately tested drug thalidomide before the children were born.

'Daddy' Ohira a Middle-of-Roader

By WILLIAM CHAPMAN
The Washington Post

TOKYO — The expected election next week of Masayoshi Ohira as prime minister of Japan will continue the line of moderately conservative governments that the nation has adhered to since the Liberal Democratic Party claimed its first parliamentary majority more than two decades ago.

Ohira may be a trifle less devoted to rapid economic growth than some of his predecessors. He is a bit less enthusiastic about generating a debate over military defence than was Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda. He will be somewhat more accommodating to Japan's opposition parties than Fukuda, who was inclined to truculence. But there will be no sharp change in directions under Ohira's tenure.

These are the views of observers here who base their judgment on association with Ohira or on a reading of his record in nearly 32 years of politics. They expect him to cling close to the middle of the road in his party and to follow the cautious politics laid down by those who preceded him.

Ohira's accession will complete a political cycle that began in 1972 when former Prime Minister Eisaku Sato left office. Four men — Ohira, Fukuda, Kakuei Tanaka and Takeo Miki — were waiting to replace Sato; all were out of the mold of moderate conservatism. Six years later, after interminable factionalism, all four of them have made it to the top.

Ohira, a 68-year-old bureaucrat-politician, virtually won the premiership Monday in an upset party primary victory over Fukuda, who promptly withdrew. On Friday he is scheduled to be chosen LDP president by his party colleagues in the Parliament and next week will be elected prime minister.

The election was essentially an extension of LDP factional struggles and it underscored similarities, not differences, in the policies of the two men.

Ohira is a beefy, slow-moving, taciturn man who rarely shows anger in public and is nicknamed "Daddy" by his aides. A philosophic politician with a streak of fatalism, he takes a modest view of what men of his calling can accomplish. "The reality of the political world," he once said, "is that it is not all being operated by saintly and noble people." He has also said that government intervenes too much in peoples' lives and that people in turn have come to depend too much on government.

Like many Japanese politicians, he is a self-made man who followed the road of bureaucratic politics to the top. The son of a farmer from the island of Shikoku, he put himself through college and went immediately into the Finance Ministry, becoming an aide to Hayato Ikeda, who later was to become prime minister. Under a succession of governments, he has served as finance minister, foreign minister and minister of international trade and industry.

He varies from the norm of Japanese politicians in several ways. He is a Christian in a country of Buddhists and Shintoists. He is a teetotaler in a profession where heavy drinking is common. Unlike most of his contemporaries who occupy leading roles, he is an avid reader who makes one or two trips to a bookstore every week. He once wrote that he likes to read many books so that he will forget about eating and sleeping.

Ohira is generally regarded as a poor public speaker and no one has accused him of having the slightest wisp of charisma. His eyes are heavily lidded, often causing him to give the impression that he has fallen asleep in public. He speaks slowly and monosyllabically and listeners frequently wonder if his sentences will ever end. His reputation is that of a man who makes up his mind slowly but sticks determinedly to decisions once made.

Ohira's economic views fit him comfortably into the succession of LDP prime ministers, with one exception. He talks frequently of Japan having entered an era of slow economic growth, after nearly two decades of booming prosperity and high growth rates. Fukuda and his immediate predecessors, Miki and Tanaka, expressed similar views occasionally, but Ohira seems more determined to come to grips with the new reality.

Fukuda had promised repeatedly during the past year that Japan would reach a growth level of 7 percent in the current fiscal year, largely to boost domestic demand in order to trim the country's large trade surplus and appease trading allies. Without expressly abandoning that goal, Ohira suggested during his party-primary campaign that a 7 percent target was not essential. He warned that strict adherence to that goal could cause a new bout with inflation. That could be taken to mean he may retract or slow down some of the public-service spending that Fukuda has initiated in supplementary budgets.

In defence matters, Ohira, like his predecessors, would rely primarily on the American umbrella and proceed to make modest but steady improvements in Japan's defensive arms. He has said often that defense must embrace diplomatic and cultural measures designed to immunize Japan from hostilities with other countries. Such phrases are usually taken as dovish code words here.

Fukuda had deliberately set out last January to initiate a broad-ranging debate over defense matters that is still going on. Many took this to mean he was seeking a national consensus for a substantial increase in arms spending sometime in the future. Publicly at least, Ohira took little part in the debate.

On one specific issue he disagreed directly with Fukuda. The prime minister had supported a campaign to draft legislation spelling out how Japan's self-defense forces should be allowed to react in the event of a national emergency. Critics charged he wanted to be able to put Japan on a war-time footing. Ohira described the scheme as unnecessary and said the present law is sufficient.

Scott's Youth Probed

MINEHEAD, England (Reuter) — Former male model Norman Scott, who alleges he had a homosexual affair with Liberal politician Jeremy Thorpe, was questioned today about an unhappy childhood, illness, frustration and self-pity which, it was suggested, led him to resort to fantasy.

Scott denied this as he was questioned by Sir David Wapley, Thorpe's lawyer.

"Would it be fair to say that when you were ill that was one of the symptoms — that you resorted to fantasy?", he was asked.

Scott: "No, I would not."

The horse trainer and former model, 38, told the court Wednesday that he was seduced by Thorpe in 1961 and gave details of their alleged homosexual relationship.

The Minehead magistrates are sitting to decide whether Thorpe, 49, who led the Liberal party from 1967 to 1976, should stand trial with three other men accused of plotting an abortive attempt to murder Scott in order to silence him.

Sir David suggested Scott might be familiar with the lines of the 18th-century English playwright William Congreve: "Heaven has no rage like love to hatred turned, nor hell a fury like a woman scorned."

"Doesn't that describe your position toward Mr. Thorpe?"

Scott replied sharply: "I am not a woman."

The defence lawyer with probing questions led Scott back into an unhappy childhood. Scott agreed he had told newspaper reporters that his mother had become pregnant on an ocean cruise and he was not sure who his father was, and that he later had been sent away from home to a special school for "care and protection".

Questioned further about his mother, Scott angrily snapped: "I think it is very sad that my mother has to be hurt now, sir."

Questioning Scott about his relationship with Thorpe, the lawyer asked: "When you first met Mr. Thorpe at the House of Commons you found him a very kind, understanding and sympathetic person?"

Scott: "At the time I thought he was a wonderful person. Then later I realized the sort of character he was."

FIRESTONE FACES FINE

WASHINGTON (WP) — The federal government is planning to fine the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. up to $800,000 for selling millions of its "500" model steel belted radial tires that failed to meet federal safety standards, it was learned Wednesday.

National Highway Traffic Safety Administrator Joan Claybrook revealed the action only moments after the formal signing of a voluntary recall agreement with Firestone, under which the company agreed to replace an estimated 13 million tires. It is the largest product recall in history.

2 Lucky Trashmen $100,000 Winners

Two View Royal men who split $100,000 on the Western Express Lottery were on the job today — collecting garbage.

The happy garbagemen are C. Don Sled, 42, of 25 Midwood, and Real Forcier, 35, of 1335 Chan Place.

They each got $50,000 from a jointly-held ticket in last week's draw.

They operate Sled and Forcier Disposal, a private garbage collection service, from the Midwood address.

It has been business as usual since the big win.

They held a winning ticket on the Nov. 22 drawing but their names were not announced until they claimed their prize.

Both men are married.

The announcement of their win was made today oy Western Express lottery officials in Winnipeg. All winners are identified as soon as they collect their money.

Sled had won $500 on a previous draw, lottery officials said.

Winners of $100,000 prizes from last night's Express draw have not yet been identified. Winning ticket numbers are published in today's Times in the official advertisement on page 20.

Nixon Greeted With Eggs

OXFORD, England (AP) — Richard Nixon, braving a gauntlet of egg-tossing protesters, told an Oxford University audience that with his approval the FBI broke up a Palestinian guerrilla network in the U.S. though wiretaps and break-ins during his administraton.

Nixon, who resigned four years ago in the midst of the Watergate scandal, was asked during a question-and-answer period whether the office of the presidency had a corrupting effect on the individual holding the job.

"There are no easy calls that a president makes," he said, giving the Palestinian incident as an example.

He said the group had been planning a terrorist attack like the massacre of Israeli athletes at the 1972 Munich Olympics.

A phalanx of security men had to escort Nixon through an angry crowd of 500 student demonstrators, many of them Americans and some flinging eggs, when he arrived at the Oxford Union debating society hall to deliver the address.

Once inside the hall, Nixon got a friendly welcome from the waiting audience of about 800 students, who applauded loud and long. But at times the ex-president's voice was almost drowned out by the chanting from protesters outside.

"Thank you for the very warm welcome of those inside — and those outside for making me feel very much at home," he said to laughter from the audience.

The demonstrators included 43 Rhodes and Marshall scholars, and more than 100 other Americans studying at Oxford.

Earlier, the placard-waving crowd of British and American protesters pelted Nixon's black limousine as it drove up outside the hall.

The demonstrators, shouting "No crooks here!" and "No more Nixon!", knocked off the helmets of a cordon of British policemen and pushed forward toward Nixon's auto. Secret Service men in tan raincoats rushed forward and surrounded the car, and police eventually held back demonstrators to allow Nixon into a narrow passageway behind the building.

Monica Bouchard inspects window smashed by five-pound rock shot into trailer

NEAR MISS BY FLYING ROCK

A five-pound rock smashed into a trailer home in Langford Wednesday narrowly missing a 17-year-old woman.

Sharon Roberts was watching television in the living room of the trailer at 2435 Trans Canada Highway about 3:45 p.m. when the rock crashed through the front window inches from her head.

"It sounded like an explosion," she said.

The rock hit a coffee table then ricocheted across the floor to the other side of the trailer where it slammed into the wall, gouging a deep hole.

Sharon said the rock was too big to be tossed by a person and believes it came off a passing truck. The trailer is situated just off the highway.

Trailer owner Monica Bouchard estimated damage at about $400.

Border TV War Urged

Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The U.S. government was asked Wednesday to mount a $100-million trade "retaliation" against Canada unless Ottawa backs down on a 1976 taxlaw that affects U.S. border TV stations.

Although it is highly unlikely that the Carter administration will grant the petition, the request shows the depth of feeling here over a squabble between two giant trading partners that involves only a few million dollars.

As one Canadian TV executive told a special hearing: "Why are we taking about $9 million when the bilateral trade between our two countries is $65 billion a year?"

The issue is a Canadian tax regulation called C-58, which discourages Canadian advertisers from buying commercial time on U.S. stations whose broadcasts spill over the border.

Fifteen American border stations claim that C-58 is discriminatory and costs them about $9 million a year in lost revenue. They are asking the U.S. special trade office, which reports to the White House, to recommend severe and punitive retaliation against Canada unless C-58 is repealed or modified.

Bart Fisher, a Washington lawyer for the group, recommended that the U.S. could retaliat in two ways: by slapping an embargo on all imported Canadian TV programs, feature films and musical recordings, or by changing the terms of the Canada-U.S. Auto Pact to Canada's detriment.

Either of these actions, Mr. Fisher suggested, would be a "last resort if the two coun-

EDMONTON (CP) — A city railway crossing signal arm had an extra load to lift earlier this week. A 23-year-old woman climbed up the five-metre barrier — and could could not get down.

It is not known how long the woman had been clinging to the arm, but she was finally noticed by a man who heard a voice above him calling "help me, help me."

A policeman climbed up to persuade her to come down, but she would not move.

Finally, members of the fire department coaxed the woman down. She said she had been chased up the crossing arm after leaving a nearby liquor store.

Mexico Earthquake Kills 9, Injures 600

Times News Services

MEXICO CITY — Nine persons were killed and as many as 600 injured Wednesday in the strongest earthquake to hit Mexico in two decades.

Police reported prisoners fled a penitentiary when the series of tremors collapsed a prison wall.

The quake rocked the Mexico City area, cracking dozens of downtown skyscrapers and showering pedestrians with window glass.

The government news agency Notimex said 15 students at Oaxaca State University in the city of Oaxaca suffered second degree burns when a container of sulfuric acid was knocked over by the quake.

A group of prisoners escaped when a wall collapsed a Oaxaca state penitentiary although four of the fleeing inmates were quickly rounded up.

The epicenter of the earthquake was in the Gulf of Tehuantepec off the coast of Oaxaca state in southern Mexico.

The first shock Wednesday afternoon lasted 70 seconds and caused panic among Mexico City's 13 million people. Many were in skyscrapers or in elevators on their way to lunch when it struck shortly before 2 p.m. Thousands of tourists in Mexico City fled from their hotels, many with their bags.

Five more tremors were felt in the capital before 6 p.m. Readings on the first and most severe shock ranged from 6.5 to 7.9 on the Richter Scale.

Police in Puerto Angel and Puerto Escondido said waves came 600 metres inland. But police in Acapulco, Mexico's biggest Pacific coast resort, said there were no tremors there.

LOUGHEED TICKETS JUST 'STUPIDITY'

EDMONTON (CP) — An Air Canada employee says he made a mistake in arranging to provide free tickets for Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed.

It was "stupidity on my part," Jack Cronin, manager of passenger sales, said Wednesday.

Cronin said he is embarrassed by the incident but does not expect to be reprimanded.

Lougheed said Monday he has accepted free vacation flights from Air Canada and CP Air a number of times during the last few years.

Cronin said: "I've been led to believe that Air Canada has a policy against giving passes to provincial ministers, but I though it was appropriate—the thing to do at the time."

Harold Millican, a former assistant to Lougheed, said Wdnesday he understood from Air Canada officials that it was policy to offer free trips to provincial leaders.

Cronin said he met Lougheed at a social function in 1972 or 1973.

"He appeared to be tired. He'd been busting his bottom working so I offered him a chance to take a look at our services. He was a bit taken aback, so I told him to think it over, discuss it with his wife and get back to me. A few days later, he did."

Cronin said Lougheed accepted a trip to Barbados worth about $1,000.

CUPW Charges Workers

TORONTO (CP) — The organization committee of the Toronto local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers is asking members to take action against other members who crossed picket lines during the postal strike in October.

The committee has issued a bulletin asking members to lay charges against co-workers who crossed picket lines before back-to-work legislation was passed by Parliament. The bulletin says charges may be laid under an article of a union agreement.

Any workers charged would be tried by a union committee.

Nigel Dunn, a post office spokesman, said workers would not lose their jobs if they were expelled from the union as a result of the charges.

"It isn't a closed shop," he said. "When an individual is hired at the post office, he has the option of joining or not joining the union."

No Oil Price Boost Jan 1: Ottawa

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The federal cabinet has decided to press ahead with its proposal to delay a Jan. 1 oil price increase of three cents a gallon despite opposition from some provinces, Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said today.

Gillespie said after a three-hour meeting "it is the view of the cabinet that it is in Canada's interest to defer the increase."

He had been authorized to open talks with Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed.

Alberta already has said that it does not care whether it goes ahead with former plans to raise the price of crude oil by $1 a barrel Jan. 1 or delays the increase.

Gillespie said he wants to discuss with Alberta some formula to protect the Canadian price from exceeding the U.S. price—a provison already included in an existing oil price agreement.

Provincial premiers declined to approve a new price pact during private talks Wednesday, throwing the question back to the federal and Alberta governments for a decision.

At issue is an Alberta-Ottawa plan to delay a scheduled January price increase until July 1, adding on an additional $1 a barrel — three cents a gallon — increase in January, 1980, in return.

Lougheed says he is willing to accept either of the two price options placed before the premiers during a three-day economic meeting that ended Wednesday.

That placed the decision in the lap of the federal government, which holds legal control over whether national oil prices should be increased.

"The dilemma of the federal government is that we are faced with the producing provinces on one hand and the consumers on the other," Prime Minister Trudeau told reporters as the conference wound up.

Several premiers said openly they feared the new federal price initiative was more politically than economically inspired.

Meanwhile, Quebec Premier Rene Levesque said today that the unsatisfactory results of the three-day conference will lead Quebec to be more selective in its participation at federal-provincial conferences.

Levesque said he feared from the outset that nothing much would come of this latest round of talks and his fears were amply justified.

Concrete proposals for federal action in areas such as fisheries, agriculture, industrial and economic development received "negative and I would even say, electoral" answers or no answer at all, Levesque said.

USC Hoists Banner Again

The 1978 Unitarian Service Committee's fund appeal in Greater Victoria is off to a flying start.

Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova launched the annual drive — supported again this year by the Victoria Times — at a public meeting Wednesday night in the Empress Hotel.

An on-the-spot collection, which included a cheque from the Times, realized $1,839, a record and up more than $500 from a rally a year ago.

Chairman Stuart Underhill, president of Victoria Press, said the Victoria campaign this year hopes to surpass the $33,600 contributed in 1977.

The USC is trying to raise a national total of $3.5 million by Christmas.

The USC funds more than 98 projects in needy countries sround the world.

The question of $2.25 million pledged by the B.C. government but never turned over to the people of Vietnam came up at the meeting.

Dr. Hitschmanova, executive director of the USC, told the meeting she had no comment on the fact the money has never been made available to aid Vietnamese war victims.

But she said the USC

Siamese Twins Doing Well

Preliminary tests were being carried out today on Victoria's first Siamese twins to determine whether they can be separated.

Dr. A.C. Pickles, executive director of the Royal Jubilee Hospital, said the girls, born prematurely to a Duncan woman just before midnight Tuesday, are still having respiratory problems because of their prematurity.

"Their condition is stable," Pickles said.

The girls are joined by a bridge of tissue across their chests.

The mother, about 20, is doing well. The twins are her first children.

The delivery took place at the Royal Jubilee Hospital because it is the best equipped on Vancouver Island to handle premature births.

The twins weighed a total of 4,550 grams or 10 pounds, one ounce at birth.

Gynecologist Dr Edward Prevost, who attended the delivery, said there was no indication before the birth that the babies were joined.

Pediatrician Dr. Chor-Kei Chan, who was called in at the delivery to assist the premature infants, said incomplete lung development is common among premature babies.

He said an attempt at separation, which usually takes place several months after birth, can only be made after it is determined which organs, if any, the twins have in common.

'At the present time, we are only concerned about their respiratory problems."

The "ventral" joining is the most common type among Siamese twins, which occur about once in every 70,000 deliveries.

Sometimes the separation involves cutting only simple tissue but Siamese twins often share liver tissue and, frequently, a heart, which makes separation impossible.

In other cases they have separate hearts and circulatory systems but the hearts may share the same pericardial sac, a fluid-filled enclosure around the heart.

Prevost said the babies are very alert and breathed quite readily at birth.

"It was not a particularly difficult delivery," he said.

Baby's Bottle Can Rot the Teeth

Food for Thought

By Dr. Jean Mayer and Dr. Johanna Dwyer

Good teeth are important to good nutrition — not to mention the pleasure of eating. As you may know from sad experience, the pleasure of a crisp apple or piece of lean steak quickly disappears if each bit triggers a sharp twinge in a molar or causes dentures to slip.

Good nutrition is particularly important to children. Childhood is the time to experience all the wonderful textures and flavors of a varied diet. But it may come as a shock to many parents to learn that many infants and preschool children already have extensive and painful dental decay which can limit their ability to chew and enjoy many foods. How is it that children so young can experience dental problems usually associated with older persons? In most cases this early dental decay can be traced to what is known as the "nursing bottle syndrome."

The syndrome is not new. In the 1800's, Dr. Jacobi, one of the first pediatricians in the U.S., remarked on the peculiar type of dental decay associated with baby bottles. In the last 25 years, a number of reports from many countries have described the same phenomenon.

The four upper front teeth usually are affected, while the lower front teeth — which emerge at about the same time — escape without cavities. The decay begins as an almost unnoticeable dull white band along the gum line — a sign that the calcium is beginning to break down. These whitish spots gradually darken as the decay progresses. In advanced cases, there may be nothing left except four brown stumps. By this time, the neighboring canine teeth and molars, which emerge later, also may be beginning to decay. The lower teeth usually are in good shape.

This characteristic pattern makes it simple for a dentist to pinpoint the cause of the problem — the child has been allowed to suck a bottle or sweetened pacifier at will, often long after the usual weaning period. The same pattern of tooth decay has been reported in children who have been breast-fed for two or three years.

Here's what happens. As the baby suckles, the liquid floats around the upper teeth. To visualize this, imagine sucking liquid through a straw. The straw is held at the top of the mouth, supported by the tongue, and the liquid is drawn in near the upper teeth. If the baby alternately dozes and sucks a bottle, there is a small pool of milk, or whatever liquid is in the bottle, surrounding the front teeth. If the liquid contains sugar, such as the lactose in milk, the fructose in fruit juice, or the sugar, honey or sweet syrups mothers often add to formulas, tooth decay is all too often the result.

Obviously, a young baby must feed from a bottle or breast during the early months of life. Milk formulas are good foods, mother's milk is nature's ideal food for infants. Although milk does contain the sugar lactose, under usual eating conditions it is swallowed quickly and has little contact with the teeth. Dental problems occur when the youngster is allowed to suck for long periods of time on a bottle or a sweetened pacifier.

Many mothers send their toddlers off to bed with a bottle, which may be suckled off and on throughout the night. Others will give a baby honey water or some other sweet mixture at bedtime or in place of a pacifier during the day. Then there are sweet-ened pacifiers that are, happily, less common in the U.S. than in Europe. In Germany and England, in particular, mothers often dip a pacifier in honey — a trick that may keep baby quiet, but one that plays havoc with the teeth and dietary conditioning.

A baby's teeth can be protected from unnecessary early decay by making sure that milk and other foods do not stay in long contact with the teeth. If you baby likes to fall asleep sucking a bottle, fill it with unsweetened water. And once a baby falls asleep drinking a bottle of milk, remove it and resume the feeding when he or she is awake.

Substitute In Honey

One cup of honey will replace one cup of sugar as long as the liquid is cut by one-quarter cup (e.g. if the recipe calls for one cup of water with 1 cup sugar, use only ¾ cup water with 1 cup honey). It's also suggested that when the switch is made to honey, you decrease the oven temperature slightly as baked goods brown a little faster.

CHICKEN: ROAST FIT FOR KING

Roast chicken is undoubtedly "finger lickin' good." It is one of the most nutritious and economical meats. Cooked chicken contains high quality protein and is also an excellent source of the important B vitamin, niacin. And, what's more, chicken contains less fat than most other meats — 90 g (3 oz.) of cooked chicken meat yields only 115 calories.

Chicken is usually a good buy all year. It's available in your supermarket either fresh or frozen, whole or half birds, quarters or pieces.

Roasting tests on whole chickens in regular and microwave ovens were recently conducted in the food labs of the Food Advisory Division, Agriculture Canada. Roasting in dry heat brings out the flavor of chicken to its fullest and it's easy to do.

First stuff and truss the chicken, brush with butter or oil and sprinkle with pepper and paprika. But remember, the chicken need not be stuffed if you just want to serve the meat or use it in a casserole. Stuffing can always be prepared in a separate dish if desired.

Ann Thomassen, the food consultant at the Food Advisory Division who directed the testing, recommends the following guidelines:

ROASTING CHICKEN

For oven roasting, place the bird breast side up on a rack in a shallow pan and roast at 160° C. (325° F.) according to the timetable below. You can baste with the drippings for extra juiciness.

For microwave roasting, place the bird breast side up on a non-metallic roasting rack or inverted plate in a heat-resistant glass baking dish. Roast according to the accompanying timetable. Cook the chicken for half the recommended cooking time and then turn breast side down. Allow the bird to stand 15 to 20 minutes, tightly covered with foil, after removing from the oven to complete cooking.

ROASTING TIMETABLE
ROASTING TIMES

Mass	Microwave (700w) on full power (minutes)	Oven at 160°C (325°F) (hours)
1 kg (about 2 lbs.)	11 to 15	1.25 to 1.5
2 kg (about 4½ lbs.)	25 to 26	2 to 2.5
3 kg (about 6½ lbs.)	36 to 38	2.25 to 2.5

Stuffed and unstuffed chickens require the same time to cook. Begin testing for doneness at the shorter time within the range.

Surely the tempting aroma that fills the kitchen will be your first hint that the chicken is done.

But there are other ways of checking to see if it is done. Press the thick parts of the drumstick and if it feels soft, the bird is done. The leg should move readily when you twist it.

For more accurate cooking times, use a meat thermometer and check the temperature in the stuffing or thigh. Stuffed chicken should reach a temperature of 70° C. (165° F.) during the standing time.

Roasting chicken is so easy to do you'll be tempted to serve it often. If there are leftovers, turn them into the following delicious dish:

Finnish scientists say: Baldness can be halted.

LONDON — Two Finnish scientists say they have designed a scalp treatment that can halt baldness and even start new hair growing in many cases.

The scientists, who are putting the treatment on sale in the form of a solution, say that among volunteers who applied it to their scalp for 28 weeks, hair growth resumed in 60 per cent of the cases and hair loss decreased within four weeks.

The product called Bioscal, contains a synthetic detergent, which clears away dead hair and other dirt clogging the follicles — the tiny sacs in which hair grows.

Another ingredient, a compound, then sets in motion a process which allegedly results in the growth of new hair.
